Lynching Bill Will Foment Race Hatred, Byrnes Says

South Renews Attack as Attempt to Limit Debate Fails.

Barkley Calls Off Night Session Plan

Democratic Party Ruled by Colored People, S. C. Senator Says.

Heartened by failure of "cloture" efforts and temporary collapse of night session plans, Southern opposition to the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill yesterday loosed a renewed offensive in the Senate against the measure that has displaced the regular Administration program.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, said it should be titled: "A bill to arouse ill-feeling between sections, inspire race hatred in the South and destroy the Democratic Party." He charged "the Negro not only has come into the Democratic Party, but the Negro has come into control of the Democratic Party."

Senator Richard B. Russell, jr. (Democrat), of Georgia, declared the bill would "lynch the last remaining evidence of States' rights and sovereignty."

Bad Threat, Says Russell.

"You might take a dead polecat and dress him up in fancy paper and label it 'country-cured ham,'" shouted Russell, "but it would still be just plain skunk meat."

Meantime, Senate Majority Leader Alben W Barkley called off, temporarily at least, plans for night sessions commencing this midweek, to force the bill to a vote.

The opposition scored another point when Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary turned down overtures for "cloture" to limit debate and compel action. McNary said Republican members would oppose cloture. As Republican votes would be needed, this scuttled efforts to abruptly close off debate.

To Fight Indefinitely.

Barring unexpected action to lay aside the measure, debate appeared certain to continue through this week and next, and Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, floor leader for the opposition, said it would go on indefinitely unless the bill is displaced.

Byrnes, who left his committee's relief hearings to take the floor against the bill, turned his fire at one point on Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, co-author of the anti-lynching bill, and on Walter White, secretary of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who has been sitting in the galleries.

Byrnes said Wagner in sponsoring the bill "is prompted by hope—the hope of securing votes from the Negroes of New York City."

Lobbyist's Bill, Says Byrnes.

"One Negro," he said, "whose name has heretofore been mentioned in the debate, Walter White, secretary of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has ordered this bill to pass, and, Mr. President, it must pass!"

Byrnes said his experience in the House has taught him "the ways of lobbyists."

"For years, this man White has worked for this bill," said the South Carolinian. Now that he has secured the balance of the voting power in many States, he can order its passage. But he would be less than human if he were willing to stop there. His job would be at an end. To retain his leadership and his compensation, he must advance."

Byrnes called Southerners "political outcasts" since the War Between the States. Although the Democratic Party has 76 votes in the

Balkan Envoy Denies He'll Wed Ann Corio

ANN CORIO.

Meeting Burlesque Queen Several Times No Indication She'll Rule Legation, Konitza Says; She's Already Wed.

Mr. Faik Konitza, minister of Albania, issued an official pronunciamento last night, to wit:

"The Minister of Albania, Faik Konitza, is a good deal amused by the shallowness of certain American journalists who, because he has met a few times the charming Ann Corio, have jumped to the conclusion that he is in love with her and intends to marry her although Miss Corio is very much married.

"Apart from any other consideration it is a well-known fact that it is forbidden to Albanian diplomats by the law of their country to marry any other than a fellow countrywoman."

When Miss Corio played at the Gayety Theater in December it was intimated she was contemplating a divorce from Emmet Callahan, who operates a string of burlesque houses in New York.

Miss Corio will be remembered by burlesque patrons as the outstanding exponent of the art of making a stage entrance excessively clothed and of becoming so informal while there that she invariably flees into the wings protected only by friendly and healthy ultra-violet light.

Nippon Sets Up 'Unshakeable' Chinese Policy

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Jan. 11.—At the first imperial conference since 1914 today, an "unshakeable policy" was established toward China, and Japan's relations with other world powers were discussed.

Details of decisions at the meeting, over which Emperor Hirohito presided, were kept secret, but the Domei (Japanese) News Agency said a statement would be issued in two or three days.

The conference, attended by the highest government and military officials, was preceded by speculation it would consider a formal declaration of war against China.

Only two imperial conferences were held previously in this century and both resulted in declarations of war—in 1904 against Russia and in 1914 against Germany.

Two in the last century—the only others held in Japanese history—dealt with the Chinese-Japanese War of 1894-95.

Admiral Nobumsa Suyetsugu, home minister and retired commander of the combined fleets, was know to favor a war declaration to facilitate an effective blocake of China.

Russia Withdraws Envoy in Rumania

Bucharest, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—The Russian ambassador to Rumania, Fascist-inclined Michael S. Otrovski, was recalled to Moscow today and will not be replaced. Premier Octavian Goga announced immediately after taking power that Rumania would liquidate her alliance with the Franco-Russian Entente.

Dutch Vessel Torpedoed on Way to Spain

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, Jan. 11.—The Dutch freighter Hannah was torpedoed and sunk today by an unidentified submarine 7 miles off Cape San Antonio, reports from Alicante stated. The Spanish government press agency declared the vessel was torpedoed but not sunk.

All in the crew were said to have been rescued uninjured. The reports said the submarine fired several torpedoes at the 3,730-ton Dutch ship en route to Valencia, government seaport, with a cargo of beans and wheat.

Twenty persons were believed killed and 45 injured in a rebel air attack today in Barcelona.

Final Battle Predicted.

Hendaye, France (on the Spanish frontier), Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Spanish insurgent officials tonight reported the battle of Teruel might develop into a great conflict along the whole Aragon front and become "the final battle of the civil war."

The insurgent statements indicated Generalissimo Franco might abandon all efforts to recapture the strategic city of Teruel from the loyalist armies, which entered it December 21.

Instead, it was intimated, insurgent forces in the mountains north of Teruel will strike eastward against the enemy's steel and concrete "El Muleda" line in an effort to reach the eastern Mediterranean seaboard and isolate Madrid and Valencia from the capital at Barcelona.

The insurgents already may have launched their offensive on the fortified loyalist line paralleling the Teruel-Saragozza highway, for a heavy artillery duel was fought at dusk today around Tardienta on the middle Aragon front.

Sirens to Tell D.C. of Every Traffic Death

Movies to Co-operate to Make Wails Hated in Safety Drive.

'Constant' Campaign Set by Police, Members of Congress.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Heralded by screeching sirens from radio stations and theater stages, a continuous traffic safety drive, described as the most intensive in local history, will open next week after Congressional and District leaders joined last night to stamp out highway deaths in Washington.

With "Thou Shalt Not Kill" as its slogan, the new safety program, designed to reach every man, woman and child in the city, was formulated at a meeting in the office of Representative William Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, chairman of a House sub-committee on traffic.

"The drive is on," said Schulte, "to make Washington streets safe for motorists and pedestrians alike. We are going to insist that police be rough and stringent, with no exceptions. We are going to impress the citizens of the District with their duty to save lives and promote safety."

Brown to Be "Hard."

Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown, Schulte added, must become "hard boiled" in his tactics to control wanton lawlessness and negligence afoot and behind the wheel.

At last night's conference, the National, Columbia and Mutual Broadcasting systems agreed to wholehearted co-operation. To this was added an agreement from the Motion Picture Theater Owners Association.

To arouse Washington from its "casual indifference to highway slaughter," the radio stations and theaters—working in co-operation with newspapers—will broadcast all traffic fatalities, giving names of victims and the time, places and circumstances of fatal accidents.

The scream of a siren to attract attention is to become "the theme song of death," it was decided. Under plans adopted last night, radio listeners and theatergoers are to become familiar with the siren's "song" as each new death is announced to the city.

Want Siren Hated.

"Washington residents," Schulte predicted, "will come to know and hate the sound of that siren. Before they have heard it many times, they will have realized what it means—not only to them but to the safety of their city."

In the same manner, theaters throughout the city will prepare trailers on traffic safety to be shown at frequent intervals. Each showing will be prefaced with the siren's wail and concluded with

Rome Refuses Pact On Trade Until U.S. Recognizes Empire

By the Associated Press.

The United States' refusal to regognize King Victor Emmanuel of Italy as Emperor of Ethiopia has resulted in suspension of the Italo-American negotiations for a commercial treaty.

Informed sources said yesterday Premier Mussolini required the new treaty to be made in the name of Victor Emmanuel as King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia and that Secretary of State Hull refused.

Negotiations, they said, would now lapse for some months, during which the situation may be clarified.

State Department attaches last night denied negotiations between the United States and Italy had been abandoned. They declined to comment on reported demands for recognition of the Empire.

Clipper Plane With Crew of 7 Missing on New Zealand Flight

BULLETIN.

San Francisco, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Pan American Airways announced tonight the missing Samoan Clipper was sighted in the Pacific Ocean 74 miles due west of Apia, Samoa.

[The plane was reported by the Associated Press to be floating in Apia harbor.—Editor's note.]

San Francisco, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Pan American Airways announced tonight the Samoan Clipper, which left Pago Pago today with a crew of seven but no passengers for New Zealand, was missing.

The ship had radioed Pago Pago that it had an oil leak and was returning. Capt. E. C. Musick was in command. He has flown 1,000,000 miles and is ranking pilot of the airline.

Other crew members were Capt. C. G. Sellers, first officer; P. S. Brunk, junior flight officer; F. J. McLean, navigator; J. W. Stickrod, first engineering officer; J. A. Brooks, assistant engineering officer, and T. J. Findley, radio operator.

Weather conditions in the Samoan area were reported to be good and airway officials pointed out the Clipper was capable of weathering considerable rough weather.

House Boosts Veto Powers Of President

Wider Range Is Voted Than Asked in His Budget Message.

Measure Also Extended to Cover General Legislation.

Broad power for the President to veto individual items in appropriation bills and even separate provisions of general legislation, was voted yesterday into the independend offices appropriations bill by the House.

Action followed a surprise move by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee on independent offices. His plan was amended on the floor to exempt the Veterans' Administration from the individual veto privilege.

The plan as adopted goes even farther than the President recommended in his budget message. The President asked power to veto individual items in appropriation bills. He said it was up to Congress to decide whether this should be done by legislation or constitutional amendment.

Scope Outlined.

Chairman Edward T. Taylor of the House Appropriation Committee, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and others had favored the constitutional amendment route.

But Chairman Hatton Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee, had insisted Congress should provide by its own action for item vetoes. Sumners recommended that the Appropriations Committee draw each bill in such a manner that individual items could be eliminated and sent back to Congress by the President.

The Woodrum amendment would empower the President to eliminate items to "aid in balancing the budget or in reducing the public debt." Deleted items would be sent back to Congress within 60 days, and would become effective after that time unless passed by Congress over the President's veto. The remainder of the bill would become law on the President's signature.

Powers Are Wide.

Representative Woodrum said he had no doubt about constitutionality of the procedure.

Woodrum said last night the proposed authority was not confined to the independent offices bill or even to appropriation bills, but would extend to "riders" and separable provisions of general legislation.

"If the President could eliminate Government functions under the economy act, within constitutional limitations, certainly we can grant him the constitutional power to reduce or eliminate appropriations," said Woodrum.

"In my judgment, Congress could do no one act which would so greatly strengthen the President's hand in his fight to hold down governmental expenses."

He said that although several bills have been offered for constitutional amendments to grant the President this power, "so far as I

A high executive of the Works Progress Administration estimated last night a deficiency appropriation of more than $200,000,000 probably would be necessary to carry operations to July.

Roosevelt, Financiers In Constructive Talks; Wage-Hr. Bill Revived

Compromises on Plan Are Proposed From West and South.

Texan to Present Sectional Measure

Alabaman Introduces Straight 'Hours' Proposition.

By Robert C. Albright.

Proposals to compromise the Administration's pending wage-hour legislation came from the West and the South yesterday, as the House Labor Committee was summoned into session today to consider the President's request for action on the deadlocked measure.

In calling her committee together, Chairman Mary T. Norton reported "a strong feeling among some members that the simplest course would be to report out the wage-hour provisions of the bill that has passed the Senate."

Eicher Launches Move.

An independent movement, meantime, was launched by Representative Edward C. Eicher (Democrat), Iowa, to combine revised versions of the wage-hour and farm bills into a single omnibus measure, to be petitioned to the floor in the event of a stalemate. Eicher said he had discussed his plan with the President and House leaders.

From the Southern sector, predominantly opposed in the past to wage-hour legislation, came unexpected developments.

Offers "Hours" Bill.

Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, a leading opponent of the Black-Connery bill, said he would introduce a "40-40" wage-hour standard bill, enforced by the Justice Department, but permitting State agencies to prescribe sectional differentials. He said he would send copies to the President and the American Federation of Labor.

Representative Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, introduced a straight "hours" bill, eliminating any reference to wages. The Starnes bill would make it unlawful to employ any person for more than eight hours a day, or more than 44 hours a week. It would abolish the so-called "graveyard" shift for women workers between midnight and 6 a. m.

Senator William H. Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, made public a letter from Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina, Ambassador to Mexico, urging Southern wage-hour bill support. Daniels wrote that "if there is any part of our country that stands in need of adequate compensation, both as a matter of

Secretly Wedded Wife of 43 Years Gets Man's Estate

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 11.—The marriage 43 years ago of a prominent lawyer was revealed in court today when Mrs. Martha Virginia Lewis, 65, teacher in the Hopewell (Va.) schools, made an oral claim for the $12,000 estate of the late Samuel A. Lewis.

Not even the most intimate associates of the former State's attorney of Frederick County knew he was married. Lewis, who died December 17, 1936, left a will bequeathing his estate to Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., from which he was graduated.

H. Kieffer Delauter, executor, said he would not contest Mrs. Lewis' claim because he found a marriage certificate in Lewis' effects.

Likely Successor To Garnett's Post

DAVID A. PINE.

Pine Is Slated To Be Given Job Of Prosecutor

Acting District Attorney Backed by Cummings and Others.

David Andrew Pine will be Washington's next United States attorney, The Post was informed reliably last night.

Pine, 46 years old and a native of this city, was named acting United States attorney by the Justices of the District Court, December 31, the day Leslie C. Garnett, incumbent, resigned.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat and his colleagues took this step so there would be no vacancy in the office. Pine had been Garnett's first assistant since 1934.

Backed By Cummings.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, it is understood, has recommended to President Roosevelt that Pine be given the job permanently, and his recommendation is supported by a number of other indorsements.

Pine was born in Washington September 22, 1891, the son of David Emory and Charlotte (McCormick) Pine. He attended the public schools, Central High School and Georgetown University Law School. He received his degree from the latter institution in 1913. In October of that year he passed the District bar examination.

Became McReynolds' Clerk.

Pine became a confidential clerk to the then Attorney General James C. McReynolds, now Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, in January, 1914. He held the post under Attorney General Thomas W. Gregory.

Then he became a law clerk in the Department of Justice and after that an assistant attorney.

Pine went back to the Department of Justice as an attorney in February, 1919. Eight months later he was promoted to special assistant

5 Industrial Leaders Attend Conference at White House.

Meeting Called One of Most Significant in Several Weeks.

President Roosevelt achieved a rapprochement with five representative business leaders at a conference which also included Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator.

The Senate Unemployment Committee heard Leonard P. Ayres assert American recovery from business recession hinged upon world developments.

Chairman Norton called the House Labor Committee to meet today to consider wage-hour legislation as compromise proposals came from Southern and Western Representatives.

Co-operation Foreseen.

By Franklyn Waltman.

President Roosevelt yesterday achieved a rapprochement with big business when for an hour and a half he sat in the intimacy of his White House office discussing problems of the current economic recession with outstanding representatives of five major units of industry.

The industrialists who conversed with the President were Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the board of General Motors Corporation; Ernest P. Weir, of the National Steel Corporation; Lewis Brown, president of the Johns-Manville Co.; M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Colby Chester, chairman of the board of the National Manufacturers Association and president of the General Foods Corporation.

The only other person present was Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator, now engaged in the practice of law here, whom the President asked to attend the conference as his friend and counselor. Both sides to the conference appeared highly pleased with the results, Sloan, acting as chairman for the industrialists, dictated the following statement to the press:

"We have had an interesting and constructive talk with the President. All of us agree we have a better understanding of each other's problems, out of which we are sure will come

Monarchists Riot With Austria Nazis At Mass Meetings

Vienna, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Disorder raged throughout Austria tonight as monarchists and Nazis clashed with clubs, stones and stench bombs at 50 mass meetings called to open a campaign to restore 25-year-old Archduke Otto to the Hapsburg throne.

Worst disorders occurred in Vienna, where 11 meetings were held in tribute to the handsome exiled youth. Nazis and monarchist sympathizers threw stench bombs amid shouts of "Heil Hitler" and "Hoch Otto."

How a 'Good' Utility Suffered After Co-op Got Loan Is Told

President Roosevelt, during his conference with three electrical utility executives yesterday, heard a detailed recital indicating virtue was not its own reward under New Deal public power policies.

The recital came from Arthur B. West, president of the Nevada-California Electric Corporation, which serves 50,000 square miles in eastern California, and parts of Nevada and Arizona. West conferred with the President with Daniel C. Green, president of the Central Service Corporation of Illinois, and John Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light Co.

West takes pride in his concern as one of the "good" utility operating companies, as defined by Mr. Roosevelt. He and his company are not part of any holding company or other financial combine. They have tried to co-operate with New Deal policies. But this, according to the story told the President, did not stop the Public Works Administration from agreeing to give and lend money to a co-operative group to compete with the West company. The result has been a 25 per cent drop in value of the bonds of the Nevada-California company.

Bankers Build Recovery Hope On Tax Slashes

Aldrich and Perkins Tell Stockholders Slump Is Temporary.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 11.—Stockholders of two of the country's largest banks heard today pleas for revision of the Federal capital gains and undistributed profits taxes, coupled with expression of hopes the present business recession would be only temporary.

Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, asserted at its annual meeting the rapidity of the business slump was in itself a hopeful sign.

"It means," he said, "that in many lines we have certainly overdone the contraction of production as compared with current consumption, and it means, further, that there has not been the weakening of the financial structure or the exhaustion of the savings of the people which a more prolonged decline of similar magnitude would have brought about."

In a similar vein James H. Perkins, chairman of the National City Bank of New York and its affiliate, City Bank Farmers Trust Co., listed four problems to be solved before complete recovery could be achieved, but added two of them were in process of solution and that the others could be met through tax revision and co-operation of capital and labor.

The problems, he said, were:

1. Stocking up of inventories last spring.
2. Increased production costs caused by higher taxation and higher wages.
3. "Ending of the inflationary support previously given to business by the Government's debt financing."
4. "The effect of existing uncertainties in retarding the flow of savings into new industries and private enterprise, thereby making impossible the sale of stocks or even bonds in the amounts required to create new facilities or increase output."

Resumption of business recovery, he said, did not await their complete solution. Correction of inventories has been proceeding rapidly, he declared, and the slump had induced "other changes in the direction of greater efficiency and lowered costs which are laying the basis for improvement."

"It has become plain that savings is handicapped by present tax laws, and in my opinion modification of the undistributed earnings tax and the capital gains tax is desirable," he declared. He said taxes should be levied "so as to preserve the incentive to saving and enterprise."

Regarding labor costs he said: "The moment an increase in labor costs raises the price of goods beyond the capacity of consumers to buy, trade and employment necessarily decline and labor, instead of gaining, has lost."

Aldrich held as his thesis that "a prompt and adequate modification of Government policy regarding the capital market would make a major contribution to business revival."

The capital gains tax, he asserted, "at anything like the high rates of the upper brackets . . . causes the dissipation of capital," and added that the undistributed profits tax "has dealt a devastating blow" to one of the "most important sources of capital," reinvestment of corporate profits in industrial enterprise.

He reiterated charges that "excessive thinness" of the stock market was due, in part, to Federal rules laid down by the SEC and Federal Reserve system.

"The adequate rectification of this condition of the stock market," he continued, "remains one of the most urgent needs of the capital market of the United States."

Aldrich's contention the undistributed profits surtax should be repealed was opposed by Lewis E. Gilbert, a minority stockholder who attends many meetings and asks questions in his own and others' behalf. He also protested against loans he said the bank had made to corporations, some of whose directors had formerly been officers of the bank.

Working for Washington

Citizenship Need Is Stressed By Mrs. Elgin, Civic Unit Head

MRS. R. E. ELGEN.

Mt. Pleasant Citizens Leader Believes Subject Should Be Taught in Schools; Seeks More Playgrounds in Neighborhood.

By Christine Sadler.

To the three R's should be added a capital C for citizenship, believes Mrs. R. E. Elgen, president of the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association and one of the District's most active P.-T. A. leaders.

"In my opinion, children should be taught citizenship just the same as they are taught reading and writing," she declared. "I feel that this would be one of the surest ways of bringing back the acceptance of personal responsibility which seems to have broken down in this country."

Mrs. Elgen, who is the first woman ever to be president of the Mount Pleasant Citizens, thinks education in citizenship cannot be started too early.

"Respect for the rights of others can be presented when children are very young," she asserted.

Efforts of the Mount Pleasant association at the present time are directed toward getting traffic lights and stop signs for Mount Pleasant corners, especially "for those streets which are coming out of the park, or are confusing for other reasons."

Seek More Playgrounds.

Mount Pleasants merchants who display their groceries from the sidewalks are being urged to take them inside for sanitary reasons and in order that the community may have a nicer appearance. Also, the citizens are working to get additional playgrounds in their neighborhood.

The association is in favor of congressional representation for the District of Columbia, but not behind local suffrage. "I think a representative in Congress is one of the most important things we have to work for. It is irking to know that any citizen from any State can get the ear of a Congressman and that District residents always are being asked, 'And who are you?'" she asserts.

Mrs. Elgen thinks that probably the citizens' associations of the District have not been united enough in their efforts. She feels that they could count on better results "if we worked on a wider and more united front."

Close co-operation between schools and citizens' association she believes essential to the rounded work of either. She became interested in citizenship work through her P.-T. A. associations and considers her work would be weakened considerably "without the close co-operation we have from Miss Elizabeth Andrews, principal of Bancroft School."

Mrs. Elgen went to citizenship meetings first with her husband, who is chairman of the Public Utilities Commission. She merely went along to hear him make speeches and did not consider that she "would be any good as a member." Last year she had her first taste of what it is like to be an active member. She was made chairman of the school committee, and in the spring was tendered the presidency.

"I believe men are much easier to work with than women," she says now.

Interested in Schools.

Her ability as an executive and also at keeping a "poker face" were tested recently when the association discussed in fiery words the order of the Public Utilities Commission which boosted the token rate on buses and street cars.

"I still don't see why three tokens cannot be sold for 25 cents if six can be sold for 50," she declares.

Mrs. Elgin is president of the P.-T. A. at Bancroft School; vice president at Powell School, and a member of the board of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers.

She began P.-T. A. work because of her three children, who still are her main interest and enjoyment. She is a native of Ohio but has lived in several States, coming to Washington in 1921 when her husband was brought into the central office of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

On Friday—Ural S. Fisher, president of the Summit Park Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

On Capitol Hill

Sub-committee Majority Favors Norris Plan to Speed Constitution Changes.

HEARINGS START Tuesday on Senator Norris' proposal for speeding up the method of amending the Constitution, the veteran Nebraska Independent, who heads a judiciary sub-committee considering his resolution, said yesterday. He added that he knew of no opposition to the amendment which his resolution would put before the States.

The amendment declares that when Congress submits a proposed constitutional amendment to the States, it shall automatically be placed on the ballot in each State at the next general election. If voters in two-thirds of the States approved the amendment, it would become part of the fundamental law.

Although the proposal is an outgrowth of the controversy last year over the Roosevelt court bill, it has drawn the support of a number of Senators who fought the latter bill.

Senator Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, said he was "very heartily in favor" of the Norris amendment. Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, have told Norris they are for it. This assures a favorable report by the sub-committee.

Senate Gives Holt's Foe Job Despite Protest

W. Va. Senators Collide on Man Who Suggested His Father Be Shot.

A feud that began in the hills of West Virginia 20 years ago was fought out once more on the floor of the Senate yesterday when Senators Rush D. Holt and Matthew M. Neely both West Virginians and Democrats, crossed oratorical swords over nomination by President Roosevelt of F. Roy Yoke as internal revenue collector for that State.

After an hour's debate that cut straight through the antilynching filibuster, Yoke was confirmed, 46 to 15.

Holt, youthful New Deal enemy, began the assault with the backing of the Senate Finance Committee, which had reported Yoke's nomination unfavorably. The unwritten Senate rule is that no one shall be confirmed in a Government position if a Senator states the person is "personally obnoxious" to him.

His Mother Stoned.

Holt so stated, referring to Yoke, and the drama came when he explained his reasons. He shouted:

"I want to tell the United States Senate that this man (Yoke) encouraged a mob to stone my mother and she was knocked down on the street."

Yoke's enmity, the Senator said, came about through opposition of Holt's father to the United States' entrance into the World War. He said that Yoke once, while addressing a school assembly at which he was present as a student, said that "Old Doc Holt ought to be stood up against a white wall and shot until his blood stains the wall."

Holt added: "And 'old Doc Holt' was my father. That remark seared my heart then and it sears it today. Yoke also advocated the mobbing of my mother because she opposed going to war."

He said Yoke, then superintendent of the Weston (W. Va.) public schools, also sought to have him reduced in his classes. He told the Senate he considered the nomination a bitter personal affront, and added: "I do not believe I myself could name another one so obnoxious to me."

Neeley Roars Appeal.

"In God's name, don't let anyone get revenge here this afternoon for something that happened 20 years ago!" Neely plead for Yoke's confirmation on grounds of personal friendship with other Senators for their votes "if my friendship and personal relationship with you have meant anything at all to you."

Neely defended Yoke's antagonism to the Holt war opposition on the basis that national hysteria had blinded many people to the consequences of war.

Senator Josiah C. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, defending Holt's position, arose to say the issue was clearly divided into two points, whether the Senate should uphold its unwritten law never to approve a nomination personally obnoxious to another Senator, and whether Yoke had made the remarks attributed to him by Holt. Bailey declared the evidence clearly showed Yoke had made the remarks, and asked the Senate to maintain its tradition.

But Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley and Administration adherents stayed closely in line to back up Neely and Yoke.

Inquiry Is Begun On Ad Profaning Roosevelt's Name

Boston, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Federal officials tonight began an investigation to fix the blame for a national magazine advertisement referring to President Roosevelt in profane terms. The attack appeared in an advertisement in "QST," official organ of the American Radio Relay League, Inc., and the International Amateur Radio Union.

In minute type at the top of the advertisement, sketched to depict the heading of a newspaper, the President was referred to as "the ——— ——— President of these United States of America."

Federal officials absolved the publishers of intentional guilt. So minute was the type that magnifying glasses were necessary to read the words, investigators said.

Bill Easing Taxes On Business Due To Pass March 15

By the United Press.

Speaker William B. Bankhead yesterday predicted the House probably would pass, before March 15, the Administration's new tax bill designed to lighten burdens of the Nation's 200,000 corporations, large and small, in an effort to end the trade slump.

He said he had been informed by Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the Ways and Means Committee, that hearings, scheduled to begin Friday, would require about a week, with Treasury officials the first to testify. The tax sub-committee is scheduled to make its recommendations to the Ways and Means group today.

Terrapin Dinner Given State Judges by Nice

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 11 (AP).—Gov. Harry W. Nice tonight was host to the judges of the court of appeals, the supreme bench of Baltimore City, and the United States District Court for Maryland, at a terrapin dinner in the Government House.

The dinner was the second given for the jurists since the Governor took office. The first was held last year. Reconstruction of the Government House prevented a dinner earlier in the administration.

The Governor said he would give a dinner to the circuit court judges of the State probably next month.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt's Bigger Navy Program Indorsed by 74 Per Cent of Voters.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 11.—President Roosevelt's proposal for a bigger navy meets with the overwhelming approval of voters polled in a Nation-wide sampling referendum just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

George Gallup.

The President indicated that his decision for an increase in navy building stems from his "growing concern" over international developments. The Institute survey reveals that more than seven out of every ten persons see eye-to-eye with him in his desire for more fighting ships.

The vast majority of voters polled also favor increasing the Army and air force. Following is the vote:

Should the United States.

	Yes.	No.
Build a large Navy	74%	26%
Increase the strength of its Army	69	31
Enlarge its Air Force	80	20

This indication of a general desire to expand the whole national defense program comes at a time when Congress is considering an increase in defense appropriations to almost $1,000,000,000—greatest outlay since the war.

Sentiment Increasing.

The Institute survey on military and naval strength is the second conducted within the last two years. A comparison of the two polls shows that sentiment for a larger Navy is slightly stronger today than it was in 1935. In November of that year 72 per cent of voters polled were in favor of a bigger Navy, as compared to 74 per cent today.

The strong sentiment for preparedness is undoubtedly due to the fact that all the leading foreign nations have become engaged in a naval race which has reached gigantic proportions in the last few years. Germany's building program is almost double her naval strength of last year. Italy is increasing her navy by more than 40 per cent, England by almost 50 per cent, France by more than 30 per cent.

What Voters Say.

Congressman Edward T. Taylor, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, declared last week: "I think the safest way for the United States is to be prepared to lick hell out of any one who attacks us." Similar sentiments for preparedness are reflected in the comments of voters who polled by the Institute, though their statements are less belligerent. The most typical comment: "If the world is going to fuss around, we ought to keep our fighting forces equal to other countries."

But a larger number of voters' comments contain the warning that while America is re-arming, she must keep herself out of trouble. "We ought to increase our fighting strength," says one voter, "but not to mix in somebody else's business, mind you!"

Institute studies have found repeatedly that most Americans want the Nation to keep a cool head in the poker game of international politics. But today's survey shows that they also want the Government to have a big enough pile of chips, in the shape of a strong Navy, Army and air force, to hold its own at the table. The average voter's attitude is a good deal like Theodore Roosevelt's famous "speak softly and carry a big stick" policy.

How Navies Compare.

A year ago last summer President Roosevelt pointed out in a speech at Chautauqua that 90 per cent of the world's population desires peace, that most of the war fever comes from the other 10 per cent. Observers say that the 10 per cent probably referred to the Fascist powers—Italy, Germany and Japan. At the present time the combined navies of these three nations, including ships building or appropriated for, total approximately 1,780,000 tons.

Great Britain's navy, including present building, is 1,760,000 tons, or just about equal to the Fascist powers. United States naval tonnage, including ships building or appropriated for up to June 30 of this year, is 1,420,000. Parity with the Fascist powers would call for an increase of approximately 25 per cent.

'Good' Utility's Setback Under New Deal Told to the President, Harold L. Ickes, in his capacity as PWA Administrator, announced his agency had asked dissolution of 17 injunctions against PWA power projects as a result of the recent Supreme Court decision upholding Federal loans and grants for power plants.

He said action soon would be taken for dissolution of all similar injunctions. One of the injunctions Ickes has asked dissolved was obtained by the company of the very man who was telling his story to the President. This was an injunction obtained by the Nevada-California Electric Co. to prevent loans and grants to the Imperial Irrigation District of California, a co-operative group.

West is reported to have told the President the Nevada-California Electric Corporation served no large city, but separated towns and rural areas. Yet it boasts of serving these outlying areas with the same service metropolitan centers get. He declared the average price on sales of his company was $1.81 per kilowatt hour, compared with $2.20 for the Nation.

Consumption Is High.

His company, he said, makes domestic sales at $3.93, compared with $4.40 for the national average. The company has developed an annual residential consumption of 1,266 kilowatt hours, one of the highest in the country, compared with the national average of 785 kilowatt hours. More than half of the company's residential consumers have electric refrigerators; a quarter of them electric ranges.

He further told the president, it was learned that the company had co-operated with State and Federal agencies, that it backed the public power development of Boulder Dam and purchased much of its power from the dam. It registered promptly as a holding company with the Securities and Exchange Commission and then merged operating subsidiaries in line with Administration policy so as to form one operating company.

PWA Aided Competitor.

Yet in November, 1936, the PWA made a loan and grant of $2,760,000, of which $1,242,000 was a gift to the Imperial Irrigation District to finance a power system duplicating the service of the private company in territory where the company gets 20 per cent of its revenue. The 5 per cent bonds of the company fell from $100 value at the time of the PWA allocation to $72 now.

The President asked West why his company didn't sell out to the co-operative. The utility executive is said to have replied that the co-operative was "broke," except for the prospect of Government money.

The President then asked if his company could not lease this portion of its service.

West asked, "What with?" meaning that the irrigation district did not possess even the money to rent his lines, it was reported.

First of the regular appropriations measures, the independent offices bill as passed carried $1,414,968,000 for 39 independent Government agencies—about $3,732,000 under the President's budget recommendations and $118,538,000 less than the amount voted last year.

The House increased the bill over Appropriations Committee recommendations by only $10,000—an additoin to the $27,087,000 Tennessee Valley appropriation recommended by Representative Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, to permit continuance of TVA fertilizer experiments.

Final passage followed an unsuccessful attempt by Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, to recommit the bill so $928,000 could be trimmed from the Tennessee Valley Authority appropriation.

Virtually every attempt to increase the total of the bill failed. Representative Jed Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, a leader of the House Civilian Conservation Corps bloc, unsuccessfully sought to restore part of the $134,000,000 Budget Bureau cut in the CCC appropriation.

Principal agencies funds included in the bill were:

Civilian Conservation Corps, $228,331,000; Civil Service Commission, $77,504,000; Federal Power and Federal Trade Commissions, $1,500,000 each; General Accounting Office, $5,306,540; Interstate Commerce Commission, $8,976,000; Social Security Administration, $329,300,000; Veterans' Administration, $547,917,500; Securities and Exchange Commission, $2,907,000, and REA, $31,652,000.

Knox Asks Cut In Tariffs, End Of Farm Bonus

Urges Republican Program to Destroy 'Monopoly' and High Living Cost.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 11.—Col. Frank Knox suggested tonight a "plain folks" Republican program which would tell business boldly it must renounce all "excessive" tariff schedules tending to increase the cost of living, and then would insist the farmers expect no cash bonuses for crop restriction.

Col. Knox, 1936 Vice Presidential candidate of the party, which for decades has championed tariff protection, told a Clevelsand audience: "Protect wage standards, yes! Continue to protect monopoly, no!

"We must speak up in unmistakeable terms to those industries which, through excessive tariff schedules, have enjoyed a monopoly of the domestic market and thus inordinately increased the cost of living for both farmers and workers."

Col. Knox' address was on the program of a dinner honoring the re-election of Harold H. Burton, Cleveland's Republican mayor.

He suggested the party sponsor a program which also would:

Return "to a certain and fixed dollar, redeemable in gold;" substitute for the undistributed profits tax a "rational measure aimed only to prevent corporations from accumulating excessive surpluses to avoid taxation;" let State and local governments handle relief of unemployment; reduce "waste and public squandering" to solve taxation problems; require union officials to account for finances and set up boards of inquiry in strikes."

Wisconsin TVA Killed in Ruling Of State Court

Decision Says Assembly Abdicated Authority to Private Group.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 11.—The Wisconsin development authority—Gov. La Follette's "Little TVA"—died in the State Supreme Court today.

The court held the 1937 Legislature illegally had delegated sovereign governmental power to the privately controlled corporation by completely abdicating to it responsibilities which can be vested only in public officials.

Although the question of appeal to the United States Supreme Court had not been decided, La Follette said the decision killed plans to set up a Wisconsin agriculture authority, authorized in 1937 to promote sale of Wisconsin farm products.

La Follette said the ruling raised serious questions concerning the validity of State and county allotments to such quasi-public organizations as county fair societies, patriotic orders and various farm groups. Aside from the $130,000 biennial appropriation for W. D. A., which reverts to the State's general fund, the decision may affect annual grants totaling $350,000.

W. D. A. had power to engage in actual purchase and operation of publicly owned utility plants conceived by La Follette. It was a private, nonstock, nonprofit organization.

Baby, 5 Others Escape Fire in Rented Rooms

A 7-month-old baby, two other children, and three adults were rescued from a $1,000 fire which threatened to destroy a rooming house at 825 Fourteenth street northwest early last night.

Speedy work by spectators and the Fire Department saved the residents and subdued the flames after little Buddy Dennis was rescued from a third-floor porch by Commander Helen Evans O'Neill, D. A. V., who was in a restaurant on the first floor of the building when the fire broke out.

Within a quarter of an hour after the alarm was turned in by an unidentified person the fire was extinguished.

Mrs. C. J. Dennis, with her baby son and daughter, Joyce, 4, and Mrs. Josephine Thompson, with her son, Stephanie, 5, were sitting in a third-floor room after they had returned from a party when they noticed smoke pouring from the vacant room directly below.

In the confusion following discovery of the fire the women gathered their children together, and Mrs. Thompson with the help of Commander O'Neill took them down the stairway past flames shooting from the burning room, to the Fourteenth street sidewalk.

Seeing all the children were safe, Mrs. Dennis gathered all personal property she could and carried her pet canary Petie to the street in its cage.

Traffic was tied up in this congested section for a quarter of an hour as engine companies 1, 2, 14 and 16; truck companies 2 and 3, and the Fire Rescue squad quickly subdued the blaze. There was no casualty.

Fifteen police under direction of Lieut. A. M. Winfree held the traffic and a crowd of spectators in control. Two fire batallion chiefs also responded.

The fire started in a vacant room and its origin was unknown.

A restaurant is located on the first floor of the building and a fur store is next door. The house is owned by the District National Bank and the rooming house is leased by Catherine Sebastian.

A man who refused to divulge his name also escaped from his second-floor room when the alarm was sounded.

Elliott Called Would-Be Czar By Morgenthau

G. A. O. Charges in Annual Report Answered in Letter to Congress.

The Treasury Department struck back at its "watchdog" yesterday in a row over bookkeeping methods as Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., accused acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott of "peremptory, arbitrary and capricious" actions.

In a hard-hitting 42-page letter to Senate and House committees Morgenthau said charges made by Elliott in his annual report were part of "the continuing effort of the General Accounting Office to assume duties not entrusted to it by law."

Chairman John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, of the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to whom the letter was addressed, obtained permission to insert it in the Congressional Record.

Minority Leader Bertrand Snell (Republican), of New York, insisted that because Elliott was a Republican his charges ought to be included and Cochran agreed.

The letter also was addressed to Chairman J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, of the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, and to Chairman James F. Byrnes, of the Senate Select Committee on Government Reorganization.

Morgenthau said Elliott in his report of January 3 accused the Treasury of failing to use accounting symbols and titles prescribed by the Comptroller General and of refusing to co-operate in getting funds of some Government-owned corporations paid into the Treasury.

12,000 Symbols Listed.

Morgenthau made specific answers to the charge of not co-operating in the use of 700 mimeographed pages of symbols and titles in accounting as called for by General Regulation No. 84, dated June 15, 1936.

He declared the Comptroller General exceeded his authority in prescribing the 12,000 symbols and that the system was not sufficiently reliable for Treasury use.

In regard to funds of the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation, in which Elliott said "the Treasury still refuses to co-operate with the G. A. O. in having such funds covered into the Treasury," Morgenthau declared that "the law neither requires nor authorizes the covering of the corporation's funds into the Treasury."

One of the chief purposes of his communication, Morgenthau said, was to combat a proposal by Elliott "which would indeed make a very czar of the Comptroller General."

In his annual report Elliott urged that "appropriated or other moneys . . . shall not be advanced for expenditure or be expended whenever there is substantial failure to install and maintain systems of accounting and procedures relating to the receipt, deposit, application or expenditure of funds."

Morgenthau said:

"The Comptroller General appears to have taken too literally the press references to his position as that of 'watchdog of the Treasury,' and in seeking to realize that figurative description to have conceived his function to be that of snapping at the heels of the administrative officers of the Government.

Reflection on "Capacity."

"The effect of the enactment of this proposal would indeed be to make a very czar of the Comptroller General. It would in effect make him the most powerful administrative officer in the government, but without any responsibility to the Chief Executive."

As a parting kick, Morgenthau said:

"The inability of the Acting Comptroller General to visualize the implications of his proposal, is, I think, a more serious reflection on his capacity to undertake such a responsibility than any criticism of him which anyone else might voice."

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat hasty, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much acid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

U. S. May Extend Philippine Trade Privileges to '60

By the Associated Press.

The Administration is thinking of granting the Philippine Islands preferential trade privileges until about 1960, President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday.

He said officials are working on the general theory of giving the islands some 14 years after full political independence in 1946 before putting them on the same tariff basis as foreign countries.

Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, said in a statement that the joint preparatory committee on independence "has been considering a plan which would call for the gradual eliminaiton of the preferences remaining at the time when independence becomes effective.

French Officer Seeks Surgeon Who Saved Leg

Flier, Knee Shattered in War, Owes Soundness to U. S. Physician.

A French officer, who owes the use of one his legs to the operating technique of an American military surgeon, is attempting to locate his benefactor.

On July 1, 1918, Lieut. Col. Morraglia, then a lieutenant, was wounded in aerial combat at Soissons and was barely able to land his plane at Plessis Belleville. He was removed to an American hospital at Juilly, where a United States Army surgeon removed his knee-cap, which had been pulverized by a machine-gun bullet.

By the surgeon's unique technique, the leg not only was saved, but so much of its original freedom of movement was restored that it became as supple and flexible as if the operation had not ben performed.

Now commander of the Fifteenth Aerial Squadron, Col. Morraglia recently was compelled by motor trouble to land his plane at Kerachi, India, during a flight from Paris to Hanoi, French Indi-China. While grounded in the Indian town he met C. E. Mocy, United States consul, and told him of his desire to learn the identity of the surgeon who had performed the wartime operation.

Fay Wins Right To Visit Son at Actress' Home

Miss Stanwyck Denies She Sought to Bar Ex-Mate Over Robert Taylor.

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP).—Frank Fay, divorced husband of screen actress Barbara Stanwyck, won a court order today that gave him custody of his 5-year-old adopted son, Dion, for seven hours every other Saturday and permission to visit the child in Miss Stanwyck's home for two hours every Tuesday and Thursday.

At one time in today's court session, when Fay's lawyers sought to bring out that Miss Stanwyck did not want Fay at her home because she frequently entertained Robert Taylor, handsome screen star, Judge Knight interrupted with:

"I don't care how many times Mr. Taylor visits Miss Stanwyck. That is their personal life and has no place in this proceeding."

Hits Praying Charge.

Judge Knight asked Fay about an assertion in an affidavit filed by Miss Stanwyck that he prayed and bowed before each cigarette he smoked.

"Judge, that's all wrong," Fay replied. "Judged by the people who made those affidavits, I probably was praying to get the cigarette into my mouth before they got it away from me.

"And another thing: I never threw Dion in a swimming pool, as they claim. I put him in once to teach him to swim, but I had a contraption on him big enough to keep Man Mountain Dean (hillbilly wrestler) afloat."

Barbara's Denial "Hot."

The actress was asked if she prevented Fay from seeing Dion so he would become accustomed to Taylor. She hotly denied this. She acknowledged Taylor has been a frequent visitor at her home and also that he had given many gifts to the boy.

She was not permitted to answer a question in which Fay's attorneys asked whether Taylor had not given the youngster a $50 Christmas check which was returned marked "insufficient funds."

Earlier opposing attorneys drew from Miss Stanwyck the statement that she was not in love with Fay when she went through a re-marriage ceremony in a Catholic church.

RoperAppoints Board to Study Airliner Crash

Public Hearings Slated to Begin Next Week in Montana Tragedy.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper yesterday appointed an accident investigation board to conduct public hearings on the crash of the Northwest Airlines transport plane on Monday.

The board, which will begin hearings next Tuesday, in Bozeman, Mont., is composed of Miller C. Foster, assistant to Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson; Robert I. Hazen, senior airline inspector, and E. L. Yuravich, senior foreign airline inspector, both of the Bureau of Air Commerce.

Party Battles Drifts.

Bozeman, Mont., Jan. 11 (AP).—Men on skis struggled across snowdrifts tonight to bring out of the Bridger Mountains the bodies of 10 persons killed when a Northwest Airlines passenger plane smashed to earth late yesterday.

The bodies were burned and mangled beyond recognition, Coroner Howard Nelson said, but from airlines' passenger lists the dead were named as:

Nick Mamer, of Seattle, pilot of the plane, who had a record of more than 1,000,000 miles of flight without injury to a passenger.

F. W. West, of Seattle, copilot.

W. E. Borgenheimer, 39, Basin, Mont., who was flying to the bedside of his mother in Wisconsin. She died about the time of the crash.

Walter Ton, St. Paul, postal inspector.

I. E. Stevenson, Seattle.

Ted Anderson, St. Paul, airline mechanic.

The tragedy brought a demand from Senators Wheeler, of Montana; Schwartz, of Wyoming, and Johnson, of Colorado, all at Washington, for adoption of the bill sponsored by Senator McCarran, of Nevada, to place the aviation industry under the Interstate Commerce Commission and provide stricter regulation.

Transatlantic Love Triumphs

Immigration men were doubtful about admitting Miss Lina Hellig, 33, of Berlin, Germany, when she arrived at Baltimore yesterday, even though she told them she and Robert L. Glass, Washington patent examiner, were to be married. Glass removed all doubt by obtaining a license and marrying Miss Hellig right then and there. They met in Berlin in 1931.

D. C. Resident 'Cheats' Laws And Gets Bride

Marriage to German Woman at Baltimore Makes Her Citizen.

Love that laughs at locksmiths chuckled yesterday at the immigration laws in Baltimore. Also chuckling were a Washington man and his German bride.

Robert L. Glass, of 4102 Fifth street northwest, division chief in the Patent Office, went to Baltimore yesterday to meet the City of Newport News and Miss Lina Hillig, 33, of Berlin. Glass and Miss Hillig met in Germany six years ago and corresponded since then.

They decided to save postage.

Miss Hillig was met by her fiance and immigration officials. When told the couple intended to wed in Washington, agents demurred. There were quotas, and possibly Miss Hillig couldn't be admitted.

Fiancee, fiance and officials adjourned to the office of J. R. Archibald, Baltimore head of the Immigration Service. There they debated further.

"Wait," said Glass, "I'll settle this."

He went to the courthouse for a marriage license.

With the Rev. Fritz O. Evers, Lutheran minister, in tow, Glass went back to the office.

Hull Launches Move to Obtain Turkish Trade

Announces Intention to Negotiate Reciprocal Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of State Hull yesterday announced the United States' intention to negotiate a reciprocal trade agreement with Turkey.

He set February 9 as the closing date for the submission of briefs by exporters, importers and producers, and February 23 as the date for the opening of public hearings.

His announcement came four days after he had proclaimed this Government's intention of negotiating an agreement with Great Britain.

Hull issued a list of import articles on which the United States could grant tariff reductions up to 50 per cent in return for concessions from Turkey.

The announcement means the United States is about to make a frontal attack on a stronghold of Germany's system of barter trade. Germany's bartering arrangements have given that country a great hold on Turkey's foreign trade. In 1936 Germany sent Turkey 45 per cent of the latter's imports and absorbed 51 per cent of Turkey's exports. In that year the United States accounted for 10 per cent of Turkey's imports and 11 per cent of her exports.

Four Charged With Contempt Of Senate Free

Railway Audit Officials Cleared in La Follette 'Spy' Inquiry.

On recommendation of Crampton Harris, erstwhile law partner of Associate Justice Hugo Black, of the United States Supreme Court, charges against four officials of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co., all of whom were under indictment for alleged contempt of the United States Senate, have been dropped in District Court, it was learned yesterday.

Two of the company's officers, L. Douglas Rice, general manager, and W. Boone Groves, vice president, of Pittsburgh, Pa., had been tried and acquitted, the jury holding their actions did not constitute an offense.

Four others, W. W. Groves, president of the company; James E. Blair, secretary-treasurer; J. C. Boyer and Robert S. Judge, the latter two directors, also were indicted. The presentments as to them were dismissed in open court.

Charges against the six men were preferred when the La Follette Senate committee investigating civil liberties, with a particular view to labor espionage, sent out official subpenas calling upon them to appear and they failed to respond.

2 Bills Offered To Discourage District Crime

Rep. Nichols to Propose City's First Kidnap Law, Bigger Robbery Penalty.

Two bills designed to discsourage crime in Washington by stringent penalties will be introduced in the House today by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, a member of the District Committee.

One will give the District its first kidnaping law, if enacted, while the second would jump the penalties for armed robbery from a present maximum of 15 years to a minimum of 20 years' imprisonment and a maximum of the death penalty.

Nichols said he had just discovered that the District has no kidnaping law. The abduction act, he said, is inadequate, and the Lindbergh law would apply only in instances where the victim was taken outside the city boundaries.

Nichols' bill would make kidnaping a felony and impose a minimum penalty of 20 years to life imprisonment and a maximum penalty of electrocution.

District prosecuting officials, while stating they favored any new laws that would reduce crime in Washington, suggested that too severe penalties might result in more acquittals.

One office said the average sentence for robbery now in the District is from 5 to 10 years, although the law permits a penalty up to 15 years' imprisonment. The minimum of the present law is six months.

There have been no kidnapings for ransom in the District in many years, officials said. The abduction law prescribes a penalty of from 1 to 7 years' imprisonment or $1,000 fine or both, if the victim is an adult, and a maximum of 20 years' imprisonment, $1,000 fine, or both, if the victim is under 18 years of age.

Hurley-Roosevelt "Break' Indicated In Massachusetts

Boston, Jan. 11 (AP).—A political break between the Roosevelt Administration and Gov. Charles F. Hurley was indicated today.

Persons high in State affairs asserted the Administration, through James Roosevelt, the President's son and secretary, was seeking a candidate to oppose Hurley, a Democrat. Hurley has said he will seek re-election.

Paul A. Dever, Democratic attorney general, one of those mentioned as an Administration choice as a candidate against Hurley, declined to indicate what office he would seek next fall. Earlier, Dever had been considered a candidate for his own re-election.

G-Men to Tell Jury of Tracing Stolen Jewels

Prosecution May Rest in Bennett Couple's Case Today.

Auburn-haired Eula Mae Bennett and her husband, James Bennett, may learn before night whether a District Court jury believes them guilty of transporting across a State line stolen jewelry valued in excess of $5,000. Prosecutor Charles Murray asserted he would close the Government's case today.

The couple is charged with having transported jewelry worth $50,000. Most of it was recovered here.

"G-men" are expected to relate today how they followed a trail from this city to New York and Florida. Edward Strohecker, real estate operator, had been approached with an offer to sell valuable jewels. He notified police and a trap was planned for a man identified as Bennett, but he escaped. Some of the allegedly stolen jewelry was recovered in the cafe where the rendezvous had been arranged.

Bennett was apprehended only recently although his wife had been arrested several months ago when she called at Union Station to obtain baggage.

Proposed Amendments.

The United Federal Workers of America plans to meet "the hazards of reorganization" by proposing amendments to the Byrnes reorganization bill—and with the incorporation of the amendments the U. F. W. A. will support the reorganization measure. This was announced in a radio speech this week by Arthur Goldschmidt, a U. F. W. A. vice president.

One amendment would insure that experienced employes would not be displaced in the service by new recruits; another would contain a provision establishing an appeals system for the service, to guard against the dangers of unfairness in selecting persons to be transferred or dismissed. Another would bring all Government employes into the classified civil service and under the classification acts, so that all Federal workers would have the protection of civil service status and the benefit of the equal-pay-for-equal-work principle.

A further amendment would eliminate the provision now in the bill which requires that the head of a noncivil service establishment must have certified that each employe under him has served with merit, before that employe is permitted to take an examination to see whether he is qualified to have civil service status.

"In actual practice the subordinate supervisors would make the certifications and so would have the power to grant or withhold them. Thereby it jeopardizes all noncivil service employes to the extent that their supervisors may be unfair or prejudiced. We propose to take out this provision in the interests of both the Government employe and the Government," Goldschmidt stated.

Forestry Film.

Someone in the Forest Service writes in: "'The Barrier,' movie of the Rex Beach story recently exhibited at a downtown theater, has special interest for a number of U. S. Forest Service men here who served some of their earlier days in the tall timber country. The picture was filmed in the Mount Baker National Forest, in the far northwest corner of the United States. The magnificent scenic background of mountains and forest in which the film story is shown, therefore, is the real stuff and not a Hollywood stage setting, and it may explain why so many Forest Service officers now bent over Washington desks long for the old days of field service. Jean Parker, star of the picture, was made an honorary forest guard by local Forest Service officers during the filming."

Observance.

Anent Civil Service Week: The American Federation of Government Employes seems taking the lead in arrangements for the observance, which begins Sunday. The event will be ushered in by a radio talk by Mrs. Bernice B. Heffner, A. F. G. E. national secretary, on the Labor News Review Saturday at 7:45 p. m. On Monday evening, Representative Ramspeck will be heard on the National Forum Program, 10:30 o'clock; his theme will be civil service legislative prospects. Charles F. Sharkey, president, Labor Department, Lodge 228, heads a committee working on plans for the Tuesday evening mass meeting. On Wednesday evening a dance will be held under A. F. G. E. auspices, to which Government workers are invited.

The Civil Service Commission will again assist in celebrating the anniversary; the three commissioners will be honor guests at the mass meeting, which will be held in the Government Auditorium, Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets, on Tuesday evening. By direction of the Secretary of the Navy, an orchestra from the United States Marine Band will play before the speaking begins. The musical program will begin at 7:30 and end at 8. Speakers will include:

Representative Ramspeck, Senator O'Mahoney, the Civil Service Commissioners, Gilbert E. Hyatt, of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, and officers of the A. F. G. E. William Green may attend. Following the meeting, Commissioner Mitchell will broadcast over a Columbia network from Station WJSV, at 10:45, p. m. He will be introduced by A. F. G. E. President Stengle.

Acacia Announces Change in Reserve Basis

BECAUSE Acacia believes in the principle of charging premiums just large enough to guarantee the payment of every contract or obligation in full, it reduced its rates in 1926 to rates lower than those of any other mutual old line company.

Since that time it has increased its assets over 250%, now more than $72,000,000; its insurance in force over 90%, now more than $387,000,000; it has more than doubled its surplus, and has paid to beneficiaries and policyholders over $53,000,000, of which amount more than $10,000,000 was dividends to policyholders.

Because of the present day problems incident to all investments, and the reduced income thereon, Acacia, in line with the practice of most companies, has changed its reserve basis from 3½% to 3%, effective January 1, 1938. The new reserve basis and the premium rates thereunder will apply only to business written on and after that date.

Under its new reserve basis, Acacia continues its fundamental principle of guaranteed low premiums and, as in the past, will make no estimates of future dividends. In the fog of present day conditions, any estimate of dividends on life insurance covering a period of years must obviously be largely a guess and, in our opinion, life insurance should be neither bought nor sold on a guess. All Acacia will say is that the savings in mortality, gains from interest, and savings from efficient and economical management, will, in the future as in the past, be returned to the policyholders.

The year 1937 was the greatest year in the history of the Company.

Under its new reserve basis and rates, Acacia enters the new year confident that its guaranteed low premiums will appeal more strongly than ever to the insuring public and that the year 1938 will be another year of outstanding progress and accomplishment.

Chinese Repel Japanese Drive Near Hangchow

Foes Forced to Withdraw, Losing Troop-Laden Launch in River.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Jan. 12.—Chinese today said they had turned back a Japanese drive south of Hangchow, capital of Chekiang Province, and had relieved the Japanese threat to Suchow, strategic rail junction north of Nanking.

They said Japanese in the Hangchow area sought to cross the Chientang River by steam launches for an advance toward Ningpo, but were forced to withdraw before Chinese artillery fire, losing one troop-laden launch. A heavy movement of Japanese troops and big guns from the interior toward the Hangchow area was reported.

Failure Reported.

In southern Shangtung Province, Chinese said Japanese forces had failed to take Tsining, 120 miles of Tsinan, and that their own troops had launched a thrust toward Yenchow, now in the hands of the enemy. This move, they said, relieved the threat to Suchow.

(Japanese dispatches have reported advances beyond Tsining toward Kweiten, on the important Lunghai Railway, but a report from the Southern Baptist Mission at Tsining said the mission was bombed Monday by Japanese war planes. There were no American casualties.)

Nippon Consul Lands.

At Tsingtao, Shantung Province seaport captured Monday, Consul General Shojiro Otaka landed from a warship with a full staff and immediately reopened the Japanese consulate, which had been closed since early in the conflict.

Japanese warcraft in the Yangtze River penetrated above Wuhu for the first time in the war, according to the Chinese, and shelled towns 50 miles up the river.

British Ships Caught in Fire.

Dispatches from Hongkong said four British river steamers were caught between the fire of a Japanese destroyer and guns of China's Boca Tigris forts, which guard the approach to Canton, but escaped without damage.

(In Paris, the French government instructed its ambassador at Tokyo to deliver an "energetic protest" against the bombing of a French Catholic mission at Nanning, South China, January 9, when a French monk was killed and another was wounded.)

Little Entente Failure Feared In Balkan Upset

Signatories to Rome Pact Eye Yugoslavian and Rumanian Trends.

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Hungary, Jan. 11.—The three Rome pact signatories examined the Little Entente critically today to determine whether it had cracked under the strain of recent political changes affecting Rumania and Yugoslavia.

Their particular concern was over the question whether Yugoslavia's new attachment for Italy and Rumania's turn to something resembling fascism had broken the political front maintained by the entente nations—Yugoslavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia.

Rumanian Upset Studied.

The foreign ministers of the Rome pact states—Austria, Hungary and Italy—gave considerable attention to the possible effect of Rumanian governmental changes on foreign minorities living in that country.

Most directly concerned by Rumanian developments was Hungary, bordered on three sides by entente states, which long have complained of the treatment of Hungarian minorities in neighboring countries. These minorities live on territory Hungary lost through the World War.

An announcement that Rumania would raise the minority question before the League of Nations also evoked speculation.

Conference Held.

Hungarian quarters reported that the visits of Istrate Micescu, Rumanian foreign minister, to Praha and Belgrade, where he vigorously proclaimed Rumanian loyalty to the Little Entente, were not without effect on the conference here.

Participating in the conference were foreign ministers Count Galeazzo Ciano, of Italy; Guido Schmidt, of Austria, and Koloman Daranyi, of Hungary.

Soviet Removes Adm. Victoroff As Naval Chief

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Jan. 11.—Admiral M. V. Victoroff, commander in chief of the Soviet navy, became the latest prominent official to meet with disfavor when his name was left off the list of appointments to the navy commissariat today.

Victoroff, formerly commander of the Far Eastern fleet, was made commander in chief last September when Admiral Vladimir Orloff was removed from that post.

The Soviet Union divorced its naval administration from the commissariat of defense in December, making Peter Smirnoff commissar of navy affairs.

Under the Smirnoff appointments completed today, Admiral L. M. Galler, assistant chief of naval affairs, was promoted to chief of staff. M. R. Shaposhnikoff, who like Smirnoff was a former army commissar, was made chief of the navy's political department.

The post of first vice commissar went to Admiral P. I. Smirnoff, commander of the Black Sea fleet. Admiral I. S. Isakoff, commander of the Baltic fleet, was named second vice commissar.

Gregory Grinko, former commissar of finance, was accused by implication of spying for Germany and carrying out "subversive wrecking." The charges were made by his successor, Vlas Chubar, in a speech at a trade union conference of bank employes.

N. I. Vaviloff, head of the All-Union Institute of Plant Culture at Leningrad, was criticized in connection with "hostile wrecking in Soviet science." The agriculturist, who has traveled extensively in the United States, was criticized in the official newspaper Socialist Agriculture, with others in the Academy of Sciences.

Bishop Destroys Windsor Pictures, Then Apologizes

Hamilton, Bermuda, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Right Rev. Arthur Heber Browne, Bishop of Bermuda, today offered the Royal Gazette and Colonist an apology for tearing down wedding pictures of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor displayed in the newspaper's office.

After the bishop tore down the pictures last Wednesday Miss Alice Stovell, a young salesgirl and admirer of the former King of England and his American-born bride, went to the bishop's lodge and asked for the pictures.

The bishop hold her they had been burned, and that she should have been ashamed to display them.

Longer Service Sought.

The war office, meanwhile, with cabinet approval, prepared to introduce a bill in the Diet extending the present compulsory service with the colors from 18 months to 24.

University graduates now receiving military training in universities, and who later will be appointed reserve officers, also will be required to be in active service for two years.

At the conclusion of the meeting, it was stated semiofficially that "the empire's unshakeable policy toward China was established." To this there was added the information that two alternatives were presented—China's surrender or continuance of the conflict.

After the conference Gen. Sugiyama, war minister, returned to the palace for an audience with the emperor.

Salamanca, Spain, Jan. 11 (AP).—An insurgent spokesman tonight said Harold E. N.Y. Appeals Court Grants Retrials to Wendel Kidnapers

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 11 (AP).—New trails were granted today to two New York City men, given 20 years to life for kidnaping Paul N. Wendel, former New Jersey attorney, and forcing him to confes falsely to the Lindbergh kidnaping.

The two, Harry Weiss and Martin Schlossmann, claimed they believed they had ben deputized by Ellis Parker, sr., chief of Burlington County (N. J.) detectives, to take Wendel to a Brooklyn home, February 14, 1936, and force him to "confess."

Wilkins Abandons Plans For Pt. Barrow Flights

Barrow, Alaska, Jan. 11 (AP).—Sir Hubert Wilkins today abandoned his plans for moonlight flights over the arctic wastes from Point Barrow in search of Sigismund Levaneffsky and his five Russian comrades who disappeared August 13 on a trans-Polar flight.

Wilkins shifted his base to Aklavik, in the extreme northwest corner of the District of Mackenzie Canadian territory, this morning.

Writing Expert Threatened on Lindbergh Case

York, Pa., Jan. 10 (AP).—Arthur P. Myers, a handwriting expert, said today he had received two threatening telephone messages having to do with the Lindbergh kidnap case. Myers studied the original ransom notes for the defense at the time of the Hauptmann trial, but refused to testify, because, he said, he believed Hauptmann was the author.

Nation's Business and Political Leaders Confer With President

Harris & Ewing.

President Roosevelt and Western utility operators yesterday discussed elimination of duplicating utility facilities and creation of investor confidence in the industry. West, head of the Nevada-California Electric Corporation.

Underwood & Underwood.

There was no opportunity directly to ascertain the President's reaction, but he was represented as highly pleased over the cordial atmosphere of the meeting. So cordial was the White House to the industrialists that Marvin H. McIntyre, presidential secretary, left his office and came to the front door of the Executive Offices to bid each a smiling good-by as the conference broke up.

Little was learned, however, regarding the specific questions discussed by the President and his callers. It was reported the conversation was general, running the gamut of current problems and touching on the labor situation, unemployment, lack of mass purchasing power and production difficulties.

It was said the conference was free from criticism, either on the President's part or on the part of the industrialists, in reference to New Deal policies. No conclusions were reached and no commitments were sought or given by either side, it was reported. The five industrialists, it was explained further, made it clear they were not representing big business or even their own industries—that they spoke for themselves only.

Co-operation Seen.

Despite the lack of specific information regarding what transpired during the conference, the meeting was regarded as one of the most significant developments in the relatoinship between the New Deal and business in several weeks. The meeting itself, along with the identity of those who attended it, made it highly significant of a new trend toward co-operatoin. No meeting like it has taken place at the White House during the New Deal regime.

Of the five industrialists, Sloan, Weir and Chester are members of the American Liberty League, the spearhead of big business hostility to the New Deal. Sloan and Weir have engaged in sharp and open fighting with the Roosevelt Administration over labor policies it has sought to impose on industry.

A Precedent Set.

Moreover, Chester's National Manufacturers Association, with the Liberty League, has been one of the chief critics of New Deal policies, especially as they related to business. None could remember when representatives of organizations that had been so hostile to the Roosevelt Administration had come to the White House for a cordial discussion of current problems.

The five industrialists, moreover, represented a good cross-section of big business, since each heads a key unit in five major industries. Thus: Sloan, in automobiles; Weir, in steel; Brown, in building materials; Clement, in railroads, and Chester, in the manufacture of consumer goods.

No representative of the electrical utilities was present, but earlier in the day Mr. Roosevelt conferred with three leaders in that industry —Daniel C. Green, of the Central Service Corporation of Chicago, former head of Middle West Utilities; John Carpenter, Texas Power & Light Co. of Dallas, and A. B. West, of the Nevada-California Electric Corporation of California.

Utility Parley Held Earlier.

The wisdom of the Federal Government in making grants and loans of money to municipalities for construction of publicly owned utility plants in competition with private companies was discussed by this trio and the President. At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt said this was a subject outside the jurisdiction of the Federal Government, since a municipality possessed authority to determine whether it wished to compete with a private utility.

The President agreed, both with the utility executives and subsequently at his press conference, that duplicating service should be discouraged. He said he would have further conferences with utility executives, but denied he was planning a future sttaement of policy. He asserted his position on that question was well known.

Auto Upswing Forecast.

Mr. Roosevelt also discussed business conditions at luncheon with Gov. Frank Murphy, of Michigan. On leaving the President's office, Murphy predicted an "upswing" in automobile production in the spring. He said he had discussed this phase of the problem with the President and agreed the automobile market had been "oversold," partly due to "sales technique."

At his press conference, the President characterized as silly a suggestion that he name the "handful" of business enterprises which in his Jackson Day dinner speech he said were seeking to retain the autocratic economic control they possessed. Asked if he had this group identified in his own mind, he said he had not—that he was not interested in particularizing but was discussing a generic group. He added that it made no difference whether the group consisted of 60, 100 or 160—that it still represented a handful of the total of business and financial entrepreneurs.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to be drawn into a condemnation of wealthy men who set up endowment or trust funds for public purposes, such as the fund recently established by Sloan to aid in disseminating economic knowledge or the Andrew W. Mellon fund. Mr. Roosevelt said the merits of each fund depended upon its details and that he believed the great majority were doing a very, very valuable work.

Relief Rolls Boosted.

During the day Mr. Roosevelt also was informed by Aubrey Williams, acting Works Progress Administrator, that Federal relief rolls had been increased since December 1 by between 250,000 and 300,000 persons. Williams said the WPA was expecting its peak load about February 1. He estimated there were 1,760,000 persons on the relief rolls.

The conference with the "big five" of business was scheduled for 5 o'clock. Two minutes before that hour Sloan and his four companions arrived together and immediately were ushered into Mr. Roosevelt's office. It was 6:40 p. m. when they emerged, all of the group referring inquiries to the General Motors head. Sloan proceeded to read the statement of the group from a penciled transcript on a crumpled piece of paper—apparently written as the conference with the President broke up.

Better Feeling Noted.

Weir first attempted to wave questioners aside by asserting that "I want to get off to Bermuda," but paused long enough to say he thought there was "a little better feeling in the country and a shade better business" and that he did not believe there existed any "insurmountable conflict between business and the Administration."

"If there were, it would look dark for the future," he added.

Richberg, whose presence at the conference did not become known until it was over, declined to elaborate on Sloan's statement, which he said he regarded as explanatory. He denied he originated the meeting and said he was asked only to "sit in."

Richberg has been an advocate of co-operative steps between business and Government, and in some quarters is credited with playing a substantial part in persuading the President to strike a conciliatory note with business after the oratorical assaults of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson.

Result of Suggestions.

The visit of the five industrialists was reported to be a direct result of the President's proposals for co-operation between business and government in his annual message to Congress and his Jackson Day dinner speech. In the latter address, he asserted that "the White House door is open to all our citizens who come offering to help eradicate the evils that flow from undue concentration of economic power or unfair trade practices."

At his press conference, prior to his meeting with the industrialists, the President said they neither asked for a conference nor did he summon them. He said they talked with some friends of his, expressing a willingness to sit around the table with the President. When this was reported to him, the President said, he cheerfully designated a time when he would see the group.

"Team Play" Proposed.

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP).—If "business, labor and the government would get into team play," the recession could be ended shortly, W. M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific Railroad, and W. F. Detwiler, president of the Allegheny Steel Co., said in interviews here today.

Jeffers declared he did not believe recent remarks by Federal officials attacking "big business" reflected the opinions of the Administration. Detwiler, expressing support for Glenn Frank, head of the new Republican Advisory Committee, as a presidential possibility, said President Roosevelt "with half a dozen words" could transform the recession into the country's greatest period of prosperity.

Blames U. S. Spending.

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Government spending was blamed for the business recession by Frederick H. Prince, chairman of the board of Armour & Co., when he arrived tonight from Europe, but he predicted "all troubles we are in now will straighten themselves out as they have always done."

World Situation Recovery Key In U. S., Ayres Tells Senators

By Sidney Olson

Whether the business relapse is to become a serious depression or a "momentary hesitation" on the road to recovery hangs on the world situation, Leonard P. Ayres, economist, of the Cleveland Trust Co., told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday.

The famous student of financial and industrial trends, a small, grave man with a grizzled brown mustache, said:

"Our recovery, which may touch bottom in six months, will depend mainly on what happens abroad. Foreign businesses have gone ahead more rapidly than our own. If our own recession should bring about a major downturn abroad, then foreign conditions would operate to postpone or make difficult our own domestic recovery."

Ayres declared that the "keylog of our economic jam" lies in the situation of the electric utilities," and, when asked for a recession remedy, said: "The cheapest and most productive investment Congress could make to insure recovery would be the absolute repeal of the undistributed profits tax."

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, an earlier witness yesterday, drew what committee members described as "an alarming picture" of rural distress throughout the Nation.

Wallace said:

"We are facing an urgent necessity for expanding rural relief. The demand for Federal aid is being augmented daily by a variety of factors—notably an impending drought in certain areas, sagging farm prices, the rapid mechanization of agriculture, and the industrial recession.

"These things are certain: Distress already is widespread throughout broad sectors of American agriculture—it is growing rapidly—and neither local nor Federal agencies have the means to cope with it."

Wilson Compton, secretary-manager, National Lumber Manufacturers Association, a third witness before the committee which seeks explanations and remedies for the recession, attacked the Administration's business policies, saying:

"The Government can help by adopting a few sound policies and sticking to them and not a sequence of self-contradictory policies and constantly changing them. If it had anything to shoot at in business, it can use a rifle and shoot at what it is aiming at, instead of using a blunderbuss and scattering shot over everything and terrifying everybody."

Ayres' outline of the electric utilities' "keylog" position in the recovery problem was closely followed by the committee.

In brief, Ayres said the electric utilities before the past depression had been getting new capital by flotation on the markets of about $1,000,000,000 in bonds each year, while the industry's annual budget for construction totaled about another $1,000,000,000.

During and since the depression years, he said, its new capital issues have been one-twentieth or less of the previous amount; while its construction total has never amounted to more than one-fourth of its previous yearly expenditure. He said:

"This great country-wide industry would be not merely able but eager to return its expenditures to more than $1,000,000,000 a year if it could be assured reasonably good prospects of return on its investment."

A construction boom for the utilities would most immediately result in a big increase in traffic on the steam railroads, he asserted, which spent in predepression times more than $2,000,000,000 yearly and since have seldom spent more than $750,000,000.

A confident utilities industry, he said, would result in a prosperous and active iron-steel industry, a vast increase in auto sales and production, and would start home-building construction "on its way." But, he insisted, "the first link of the chain is the electric utilities rather than and before anything else."

His argument for repeal, rather than modification, of the undistributed profits tax was based on his statement that "rightly or wrongly, business regards that tax as the embodiment of an unfriendly attitude of the Administration.

Wallace reported 168,707 rural families were on relief in December at a cost of $2,278,668, as compared to 53,929 families in July, 1937, at a cost of $941,091.

PERSISTENT BACKACHE
Look To Your Kidneys
They May Need Attention

It's an old saying that "thousands have kidney weakness and don't know it."

Backache may or may not come from bad functioning kidneys, but it often does.

Much of the waste, excess acids and poisons are drawn from the blood and expelled thru the kidneys and bladder —if the kidneys become inactive and do not work naturally they need flushing just as do the bowels.

So if your back aches—if your bladder is irritable—if passage is difficult or scanty and ofttimes smarts and burns—if you have to break your refreshing sleep by getting up often at night—if you are continually nervous or irritable, it may be that your kidneys need attention.

One good and effective Kidney diuretic and stimulant that brings gratifying results is GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—it's safe—it's harmless—and has been helping people with weak kidneys for scores of years.

But be sure it's GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules——right from Haarlem in Holland—ask for and get GOLD MEDAL — the original — the genuine—Be smart enough not to accept a counterfeit.

A REPORT OF Constructive Public Service
BY A PUBLIC UTILITY SYSTEM

THIS informal report, for the year 1937, is submitted for the information of the general public as well as the customers of the operating companies in the Commonwealth & Southern system and the security holders of The Commonwealth & Southern Corporation.

The Commonwealth & Southern system consists of five northern and six southern operating companies which together serve electrically over 3,100 cities, towns and hamlets. They have an average population of 1,650 each. A total of over one million homes—634,000 in the north, 446,000 in the south—are served.

A large number of the customers live on farms or in outlying territory where costs of serving electricity—particularly transmission—are high in comparison with more densely populated areas.

The operating companies are bound together by the unified sales promotion, engineering, operating and financing staffs of the non-profit Commonwealth & Southern service organization. This unified operation makes it possible for the operating companies to render the constructive public service outlined here:

FINANCING

The service organization during the last three years has negotiated the refunding of $264,174,700 of outstanding bonds and preferred stocks of the northern operating companies with new securities bearing lower rates of interest and dividends. As a result the northern companies effected savings of over three and one-half million dollars a year in interest and dividend charges.

In the south, it has been wholly impossible to refund any of the outstanding securities of the operating companies because of the actual and potential competitive operations of the Tennessee Valley Authority. Also because the Federal Government, in that area, is pursuing a policy of securing markets for T.V.A. power by free gifts to municipalities of 45% of the cost of new distribution systems with which to duplicate existing utility systems.

The senior securities of these southern operating companies, by reason of this activity of the Federal Government, are selling currently in the market at $88,000,000 less than their par value. This affects 83,000 owners of these securities. Moreover, 200,000 people own the stock of The Commonwealth & Southern Corporation whose investment, in turn, is depressed.

Because of the inability of these companies to raise money in the open market, The Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, in the last five years, has advanced to these southern companies approximately $30,000,000 from its own treasury, mainly for indispensable construction work. Thus have they continued efficient service to the 550,000 urban, suburban, farm, commercial and industrial users dependent upon them.

CHEAP ELECTRICITY

City and farm customers of Commonwealth & Southern system pay an average residential rate of 25% below the national average. They paid about 3¼ cents (average) per kilowatt hour for the year 1937. This is a lower average residential rate than is obtained in any other utility group in the United States.

GREATER USES OF APPLIANCES

For years the Commonwealth & Southern system has intensively promoted the use of all kinds of labor saving and convenience appliances in the home. Northern and southern companies cooperate with local dealers and help them arrange sales of equipment at prices and on monthly payments to suit all classes of customers. In 1937 net sales of appliances made by the system, itself, were about $17,500,000—a new high in appliance sales.

RESULT—HIGHER K.W.H. USE

As a result of these progressive policies, the average Commonwealth & Southern home—in the northern and southern territories—is using 37% more electric service than is being used in the average American home. To state it another way, the average C. & S. home used close to 1,100 kilowatthours of current in 1937—enjoyed an electrical standard of living one-third higher than the average U. S. home.

BRINGING THE CITY TO THE FARM

The companies in the system are and have been for years aggressively pushing rural electrification. More than 7,300 miles of new lines were built during 1937 to serve over 35,000 new rural customers while 15,000 new rural customers were being added to already existing lines. No other major system is doing more for rural electrification.

HELPS CARRY THE TAX BURDEN

Taxes of the Commonwealth & Southern system to various local, state and federal governmental agencies, amount to $18,337,000 for the twelve months ended November 30, 1937.

STRUCTURE AND POLICY

The Commonwealth & Southern Corporation has a simple, clear corporate structure. It directly owns common stock and other securities of its operating companies and makes no profit on supervision, financing, engineering or from any other service.

The Corporation considers that its function is to see that consumers of the system receive the largest possible use of energy at the lowest possible rates. Also, to give a diversity of investment which, in the absence of government competition, should insure a stability of investment to the thousands of individual owners of its securities.

The Commonwealth & Southern system is now giving its consumers large average use of electric energy at low average rates. If taxes were not so high and if the southern companies could refund securities, the system could earn a satisfactory return for its investors and could spend a great deal more money expanding its facilities . . . and thus aid a general business recovery.

South Renews Lynch Bill Fight As Cloture Fails

Lynch.

Senate, he said the South has been "deserted" by Northern Democrats, and now has nowhere to look for support in its fight against the anti-lynching bill.

"The lone voice coming from the North thus far in defense of the South and in opposition to this bill is that of the Republican Senator Borah, of Idaho," he said.

"I would lose respect for the South should the day ever come when Southerners fail to remember that speech and be grateful for it."

Pictures Enforcement.

Then he said Governors in Southern States, who have taken every precaution to prevent lynching, and reduced their number to 8 last year, would be justified in telling the Government, if the antilynching bill passed, "to assume responsibility for enforcing the law." He said the Governor of South Carolina already has served notice he will not order out the National Guard as in the past, upon rumors of trouble, to prevent a lynching.

Byrnes asked if this would mean "prosecution" for his Governor under the act.

"I want to visualize that prosecution," he said. "Where are you going to try him? He will be tried by a judge who is a South Carolinian and by jurors who are South Carolinians. That will be a great spectacle."

Says Race Will Suffer.

In such a case, Byrnes said, the District attorney, fearing his loyalty would be questioned, would ask the Attorney General to send a representative to conduct the prosecution.

"If the Senator from New York (Wagner) and his friend, Walter White, demand that a representative of the Attorney General conduct the prosecution, I know it will be done," continued Byrnes.

"Certainly if White demands it, it will be done. To complete the picture, they ought to send the Negro who is now Assistant Attorney General. I must assume that somebody will have the good judgment not to do that."

He declared "the result of it all will be that race hatred aroused will bring untold suffering to the unfortunate Negroes of the South, who today know nothing of the political activities of the professional Negro politicians of the North."

Citing statistics by the Federal Bureau of Investigation that the crime of rape has increased steadily in the big cities, he said that "in this terrible record of increase in so heinous a crime the authors of the bill see no justification for the Federal Government enforcing the law, but when eight men are lynched in the entire year of 1937, then the Congress must enact a law to have the Government punish the duly elected officers of the State and make the counties liable to damages."

South Carolina Thanks Borah.

Buddy Louis Payne Breaks Into Print A Trifle Belatedly

BUDDY.

Buddy is an orphan who lives with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ross. He goes to the Bryan School and sings in the choir of the Church of the Nativity, 1340 Massachusetts avenue southeast. His grandparents, his teacher and his rector all say he is a fine boy.

Buddy sang Sunday in a candlelight service at his church. He was the center of the group of five choir boys whose picture appeared Monday in The Washington Post.

All of this, should and did make Buddy happy. But when he read the caption underneath the photograph, his joy turned to gloom. For inadvertently his name had been omitted.

There you are, Buddy. This is your own special story.

'Chuckaboom'—The Wackiest Dance

Eleanor Powell demonstrates her new step, the "chuckaboom," which she calls the "wacky" dance to end all "wacky" dances. It has "galumph," and a lot of folks are "cr-r-razy about it," she says. The step has something to do with the beat of drums.

Associated Press, Wire Union Agree

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Associated Press yesterday signed an agreement, covering wages and working conditions in its traffic department, with the Commercial Telegraphers Union.

The C. T. U., which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is recognized as the sole union bargaining agency for employes in the traffic department engaged in the leased wire, radio and wirephoto service. It is provided that the closed or preferential shop will be taken up later.

Woman, Too Ardent Mate Lose Suits

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Catherine Cady, 28, who charged her husband, Glen, with cruelty because he made love too ardently was out of court yesterday.

Circuit Judge John Prystalski ruled there was insufficient evidence and dismissed both Mrs. Cady's suit for separate maintenance and Cady's crossbill for divorce.

Concerning the wife's allegation that Cady made love too thoroughly and too often the judge said: "It is not the duty of the court to regulate the duties of the husband and wife."

Wage-Hour Bill Compromise Proposal Made

right to the recipient and for the public good, it is that portion of the South from which most of the votes are coming to kill the labor bill."

After introducing his hours bill, Starnes took exception to reports that the recent Alabama elections indicated Southern wage bill support that would be reflected in the next House test. (Representative Lister Hill, wage-hour bill supporter, was elected to the Senate over Tom Heflin, opponent of wage legislation.)

"People who say that election had any wage-hour significance are simply talking long-distance, through their hats," Starnes said. "Seven members of the Alabama House delegation, including myself, all opposed to wage legislation, supported Hill. Newspapers opposed to wage legislation supported him. The only thing that election meant was the defeat of Tom Heflin. It won't change any votes on the bill."

Takes Opposite View.

But Chairman Norton, of the House Labor Committee, took a contrary view.

"The attitude of the House has changed so completely since our bill was recommitted, that I believe it would be possible to bring back the same bill and have it approved," she said.

"The change was entirely brought about by the Alabama election. That has convinced a number of Southern members that perhaps they were wrong in opposing it."

Mrs. Norton said she was calling her committee into executive session "to air our views and decide what to do."

"Personally," she said, "I do not think it is necessary to draft an entirely new bill, and I do not think we need to hold another set of hearings. The whole question has been thoroughly discussed, and I think new hearings would be a waste of time."

She said it was "possible" the committee might decide to report out the wage-hour provisions of the Senate bill, because "differentials in that bill are similar to our own and the only major difference was their provision for administration by a Federal board."

Dies Proposes Own Bill.

Representative Dies, who fought the Black-Connery bill in the Rules committee and again on the House floor, surprised colleagues by proposing a bill of his own. He said his principal objection to the earlier measure was that "it provided no floor and no ceiling, and required administration by a bureaucracy at Washington."

"My bill would provide a statutory 40-40 wage-hour standard, and, like the Federation of Labor bill, would be enforced by the existing Justice Department set-up," Dies said.

"State agencies would be permitted to reduce the 40-cent an hour standard to as low as 30 cents, if local conditions warranted. In cases of extreme emergency, they could lower it to 25 cents, but in that extreme the approval of the Secretary of Labor would be required.

"Similarly, the 40-hour week provision could be increased by the State agency, after hearings, to as high as 44 hours, where special conditions required it. In extremes they could go to 48 hours, but in that case time-and-a-half would have to be paid for excess hours worked."

A Combination Measure.

The Eicher bill, combining in one measure wage-hour and farm legislation, is designed to rally to common support farm and urban members of the House who often have worked at cross-purposes.

Its wage-hour provisions are largely those of the wage-hour bill originally reported by the House Labor Committee before the special session. Farm provisions embody the "cost of production" plan offered as an amendment by Senator William Gibbs McAdoo (Democrat), of California, which came within six votes of Senate adoption. The farm section, Eicher said, is designed to assure farmers cost-of-production on domestically-consumed portions of their crop, and a division of the price received for surplus crop sales abroad.

"In the event the farm bill is still stalemated in conference on February 10, and no action has been taken on the wage-hour bill, I will offer a petition in the House to discharge the Agriculture Committee from consideration of my bill," Eicher said. "In that event I think I could get the 218 signatures necessary to force it to a vote."

U. S. Planes Asked To Golden Gate Fair

Daily aerial reviews may mark the Golden Gate Exposition to be held next year, Emory Bronte, special commissioner in charge of the aviation program, said yesterday after conferring with civil and military authorities.

Conversations with J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and Brig. Gen. H. H. Arnold, assistant chief of the Army Air Corps, encouraged him to believe that Federal aviation units would co-operate to the fullest extent.

He explained that the promoters of the fair were trying to induce the Army, Navy and Marine Corps to incorporate daily flights over the exposition grounds in their annual training program.

PRESS THE CLUTCH to start quicker

Here's right smart footwork for right smart starting in the cold: Down with your clutch pedal before you do anything else. Then your starter and battery won't be turning the gears, but only the engine, which is just that much easier to do.

Now don't let up on the clutch, but pull out the choke (unless automatic) and then spin your starter, leaving ignition OFF.* After a few engine revolutions, switch on the ignition... And hark to the strong steady firing of your Special Winter Blend Conoco Bronze, which is certainly the sensible gasoline for quick starting.

A Stabilizing Factor.

Within the next few weeks approximately three-quarters of a million idle workers in 22 States and the District of Columbia will begin to receive unemployment insurance benefits. Chairman Altmeyer of the Social Security Board estimates that if the present amount of unemployment continues throughout the year as much as $225,000,000 may be paid out in this manner. Private estimates based on information coming into State agencies indicate that total benefit payments will average about $7,000,000 weekly for the next few months.

The anticipated volume of disbursements is small by contrast with the bonus payment of some $1,700,000,000 to veterans in 1936. But, dollar for dollar, the insurance payments will do a great deal more to relieve distress without demoralizing after-effects than was the case with the bonus.

Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, for example, recently testified before a Senate committee that bonus payments were largely responsible for the present business recession. The payments, he explained, created an inflationary psychology and were extremely ill-timed, coming as they did when the Government was borrowing heavily to finance relief and public works programs. The result was heavy wholesale buying, followed by an equally sudden drop in demand as prices rose while bonus payments were exhausted.

Insurance benefits payable to the unemployed at the present time are not adding fuel to an inflationary fire. In fact, an unemployment insurance system has a stabilizing effect on business. Taxes collected to build up insurance reserves tend to curb inflationary developments in boom times, while payments to the unemployed in periods of declining business check the rapidity of the descent.

Furthermore, the insurance benefits go to those most in need of them at the time when most wanted. Unlike the veterans' bonus or any other windfall subsidy paid to a special group, unemployed benefits are largely used to buy articles of prime necessity instead of being spent on all sorts of luxuries and semiluxuries, with demoralizing effect both upon those who spend and upon the industries affected.

When the unemployment insurance system is fully operative over the entire United States it should provide not only a timely but a substantial aid to those in need. It is not a subsidy but an obligation due because of past contributions to insurance reserve funds. By helping to tide workers over periods between jobs, such payments will do something to protect business from the extreme shocks of fluctuating demands for goods. And in that way they will actually tend to reduce the amount of unemployment.

Seeking A New Relief Policy.

During the past week the special Senate committee charged with formulating policies for dealing with unemployment has been receiving valuable advice and suggestions from witnesses summoned to testify. Members of the committee are plainly impressed by the importance of studying the unemployment problem objectively, with a view to formulating long-range policies. Hence, they have asked leading industrialists, representatives of organized labor and responsible Government officials to aid them by a frank statement of their opinions.

So far the interviews have been both interesting and genuinely informative, partly, no doubt, because the committee has lived up to Chairman Byrnes' promise that it would not try to show that "either labor or capital deliberately brought about the present recession." If committee members continue to avoid political controversies and make the investigation a fair and impartial study of the conditions that give rise to unemployment, they will have an opportunity to perform a highly valuable service for Congress and the country.

In previous years the Administration has had confidence in the superior efficacy of its own plans for handling unemployment and related economic problems, and Congress has been willing to fall into line. Today the situation appears to be different. The Administration measures have patently failed to provide a solution for the evils of chronic unemployment. Moreover, the current business recession has added thousands to the army of idle who sooner or later will become public charges unless industrial activity soon expands.

There is both incentive and opportunity, therefore, for Congress as a legislative body to take the initiative in grappling with unemployment instead of passively accepting ready-made programs presented to it by the President.

Back To The Tragic Era?

Senators who are fighting the anti-lynching bill are said to be engaged in a filibuster. No doubt some have prolonged their remarks to consume time. But the high caliber of the discussion during the last few days frees it entirely from the sinister implications of the term "filibustering."

The speakers have not only held closely to their subject; they have also revealed the heart of the issue before the Senate. While unanimously deploring the now isolated cases of mob murder, they have dissected the anti-lynching bill and found it to be impractical, unnecessary, repugnant to the American system of government and an insult to the South. The really strange aspect of the "debate" is that no effort is being made to answer these devastating attacks upon a bill of grave import.

In actual practice the effects of the bill might not be far-reaching. Lynching, as Senator Harrison pointed out, is decreasing faster than any other major crime. The comprehensive records presented by Senator Miller indicate that 2.1 persons were lynched per million population 40 years ago, compared with only .06 last year. So application of the law presumably would not be extensive. It is, as Senator Miller said, the "underlying philosophy of the bill" that gives it real significance.

Lynching is usually common on frontiers where law and order have not been established. It became a serious problem in the South largely because of the stupid "reconstruction" policies foisted upon that section following the Civil War. Carpetbaggers imposed a reign of terror on the South. Local government was crushed by ruthless Federal interference, leaving a legacy of bitterness and hatred that has not yet been entirely eliminated from the Southern States.

"Everyone now recognizes it," Mr. Harrison told the Senate, "as one of the Government's worst mistakes." Everyone, it seems, except the sponsors of the anti-lynching bill. For that measure would permit the Federal Government to invade the rights of the States in a manner that was specifically frowned upon by Congress even in those hectic days when the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution was adopted. The latter point was pointedly emphasized by Senator Borah.

It is impossible to read the debate on this bill without realizing that it is reopening the old wounds and bitter antagonism of the Reconstruction Era. Once more the South fears that a determined majority in Congress is ready to trample down its right to control its local affairs. Of course, that does not mean that the Southern States wish to see lynching continue. Every rational person in all sections of the country wants to see it eradicated. But the South has a right under the Constitution to meet the problem in her own way. And the progress already made is proof of the sincerity of her efforts.

Why, then, should there be this effort in Congress to raise once more the shadow of the tragic era? Senators Byrnes, Harrison and others see political motives behind the bill. Many Democrats from Northern States undoubtedly expect to gain political support on the false assumption that a vote for this bill is a vote against lynching. But if, in following that course, they arouse new sectional and racial feelings, they will be shown as enemies and not friends of the Negro.

It is particularly ironical that this threat against local self-government should come while the Democratic Party is in control of both the legislative and executive branches of the Government. The Northern branch of that party is striking a terrific blow at the Solid South. Even those Senators who seem to have lost their interest in preserving the American type of democracy can scarcely afford to drive a wedge into their party for imaginary political advantages in their own States.

A Challenge To Britain.

The assassination by Arab terrorists of James Leslie Starkey, the famous British archaeologist, is the latest in a long line of political murders which have made life and property increasingly unsafe in the Holy Land. All of them have been inexcusable. But this outrage would seem too flagrant for the British authorities to condone.

Starkey had no connection with the mandatory government. A disciple and associate of Sir Flinders Petrie, he continued the latter's important archaeological researches in Palestine and made some extremely important discoveries regarding the Solomonic era and earlier times. His wanton murder cuts short a promising career at its very prime.

Such assassinations constitute a real challenge to Great Britain. The conciliatory policy pursued by that government in Palestine over a long period of years, and manifested again in the decision to send still a new investigating commission, seems only to have encouraged the Arab extremists. They are apparently convinced that if their terrorist tactics are continued long enough Britain will submit to their demands.

But there is more likelihood that the assassination of Mr. Starkey will stiffen the backbone of the London government, compel the authorities to redouble their vigilance and strengthen the law-enforcing agencies. No matter what policy Great Britain may decide to pursue in Palestine in the future, absolute order and the suppression of all terrorism constitute the essential prelude.

If Japan Declares War.

A powerful element in Japan headed by Admiral Suyetsugu, the home minister, is urging the Emperor to sanction a formal declaration of war on China as the quickest way of bringing that nation into complete subjection.

Up to now Japan has refrained from taking this step, although more than six months have elapsed since the undeclared hostilities began. The essential reason for the present "informal warfare" is obvious. A declaration of war involves an eventual peace conference, at which all powers with treaty rights in China would, of course, have their say. To avoid this complication most Japanese leaders seek a dictated settlement from which they hope that the United States and other Nine-Power Treaty signatories can be excluded.

Whether Japan declares war on China or not the decision will obviously be based on a careful calculation of how Japan's interests can best be served. And as a completely free agent the position of the Japanese government offers an interesting contrast with that of the United States.

Employing the limited discretion vested in him by the neutrality law, President Roosevelt has so far refused to invoke that measure in the present Far Eastern conflict. His decision has met with the active or tacit approval of the great majority of the American people, which fully realizes that in effect invocation of neutrality would tend to aid the aggressor at the expense of his victim. But the President's discretionary power would be more subject to question if there were an actual declaration of war by Japan.

In other words, the ultimate decision regarding the invocation or noninvocation of the neutrality law rests not so much with the Government of the United States as with that of Japan, a nation the State Department has formally branded as the aggressor in the China war. Yet the same sound and cogent reasons for the sidetracking of the neutrality measure would continue to obtain after a Japanese declaration of war as have obtained until now. Indeed, these reasons would be more pronounced, for formal Japanese war against China would imply more definite American resistance to the aggressor, in conformity with the Nine-Power Treaty.

Thus is demonstrated the dangerous absurdity of the neutrality law. In seeking to write an iron-clad prescription for an uncertain future, Congress unwittingly, though not without warning by the more far-sighted, adopted a measure calculated to emasculate the peace-preservation policy for which this country has long labored.

Unless and until the neutrality law is declared inapplicable to the Sino-Japanese conflict our influence for peace in that area will continue to be negligible, although our responsibilities may become increasingly great. It is an intolerable dilemma which should be resolved quickly by intelligent Congressional action.

How Doth The Busy B.

Those who have on occasion seen pink elephants disporting themselves in the gray of the morning will rejoice to learn that the freakish animals may be definitely removed from human ken by a mighty hunter known as Vitamin B-1.

Pink elephants, we learn from an authoritative source, are born of polyneuritis, a disease due to undernourishment when chronic heavy drinkers neglect their meals. And Dr. Norman Jolliffe, a public benefactor if ever there was one, says distillers may, at a cost of half-a-cent a pint, prevent the alcoholic nerve troubles by putting into the liquor the vitamin with the letter and number indicated.

In order to be strictly up to date Gelett Burgess will now have to rewrite his famous quatrain, in something after this fashion:

Pink elephants are steeped in sin;
I would not care to see one.
I'd rather see a Vitamin,
And, for a choice, a B-one.

Of course it may occur to some folks that another and most effective way of escaping the pink elephants would be to avoid the liquor.

An organization is advocating a 13-month year. We're unalterably ag'in it. The way things have been going for a long time, it's all we can do to live through 12 months a year.

"Congress Overwhelmed With Bills."—Headline. Congress and us.

From the St. Louis Star-Times.

What world unrest has done to the attitudes of American youth is indicated in the action of two student organizations, both of which have stumped vigorously for peace, in modifying their stands. The American Student Union, meeting at Poughkeepsie, New York, rejected the once indorsed Oxford pledge not to support any war. In Albuquerque, N. Mex., the American Student Federation voted five to one to withdraw a resolution adopted last year, against bearing arms for the United States outside the Nation's borders.

There is no unanimity of sentiment, of course. The Methodist Student Conference, meeting in St. Louis, reported in favor of the Ludlow war referendum idea and urged a military policy confined to home defense. On all sides, however, youth seems to be getting over the idea that war and chaos can be staved off by nonresistant pacificism.

"Not President's Baby."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Disillusioned" in The Post of January 5 finds himself wondering "if Mr. Roskefeller and Mr. Mellon, for instance, may not have done more to provide employment and the more abundant life than either Mr. Jackson or Mr. Ickes."

For the information of "Disillusioned," employment depends on production. Production depends on consumption. Consumption depends on purchasing power and purchasing power depends on income. Adequate incomes for the mass of the people result in maximum employment while excessively large incomes for the few, when largely hoarded, mean reduced purchasing power and therefore reduced employment. Unemployment increases in proportion to the amount of income not translated into purchasing power.

Unemployment is not President Roosevelt's baby. Unemployment became a major problem under a former Administration which pursued policies generally considered favorable to the development and growth of big business and of big fortunes. Before the coming of huge individual fortunes and huge corporations with their huge surpluses there was no unemployment problem.

I say, more power to President Roosevelt and his trust busters.

Jackson Day Speech.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many have cynically contended that President Roosevelt has been merely indulging in generalities highly agreeable to all progressives but by no means meant to launch a genuine offensive against predatory capital. They maintained that he would gradually ease up in his criticisms of monopoly.

These people will get scant comfort for their belief in the uncompromising terminology of the Jackson Day dinner speech. In that speech there was no hint of star-chamber schemes to patch up differences with the exploiters. If words signify anything, it was a speech that meant war to the hilt against profiteers.

Widening District Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The people of Washington depend almost entirely on their annual appropriation bill for civic improvements and the bill submitted by the Budget Bureau included several important projects but have very little in the way of street widening—only one major widening along K street. What about the 33 street projects to be widened over a period of five years

The bill provided for the widening of New York avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets (north side) whereas around the corner on Fifteenth street from New York avenue to Vermont avenue the combined sidewalks are wider than the street. Moreover, provision was made for widening a portion of Twelfth street whereas the next street to it, Eleventh street between Massachusetts avenue and Florida avenue, is in my opinion the most outstanding street in need of widening of any street in the entire District of Columbia and should have been widened years ago. This street if widened would relieve congestion on Thirteenth street and with less grade at Florida avenue would be preferred to Thirteenth street and it would bring traffic downtown from New Hampshire avenue, which has been extended into Maryland.

The sub-committee members of the House which puts the finishing touches on the bill should include more street-widening projects if this worthy program is to be carried out. And it must be carried out, for it is the only method other than subways of relieving congestion and improving transportation in and out of the downtown section.

The Far Eastern War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is almost universal detestation of the aggressive warfare being waged by Japan, but opinion differs regarding the most suitable action to be taken.

Jingoes are demanding forceful measures to redress the sinking of our ships, but the great majority of Americans insist that we keep out of war.

Refusal by individuals to buy Japanese goods, at some loss to themselves, is a proper gesture of disapproval but will not nullify an invasion that has progressed to the stage of successful conquest.

If the League of Nations and the United States had inaugurated a complete suspension of trade when Japan first invaded Manchuria in 1931, the conquests of Manchukuo, Ethiopia and China would have been prevented.

Our Government will obtain greater security by international co-operation to prevent aggression than by reliance upon a Navy that can never exceed the combined fleets of our enemies.

WILLIAM FLOYD,
New York City, Jan. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of a truth there is nothing new under the sun. In 1033 B. C. this was written: "He hath put forth his hands against such as be at peace with him: he hath broken his covenant. The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart; his words were softer than oil; yet they were drawn swords." (Psalm 55: 20,21.)

How nicely this fits in with Japan's "Excuse me, please," while with drawn sword she murders the innocents in China.

F. H. CHARITY.
Washington, Jan. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I saw the newsreel of the Panay sinking today, and am strongly in favor of a boycott against Japanese goods, and think that the United States should ship airplanes, arms and ammunition to China, while denying them to Japan.

Nippon has no right to order anybody out of China, nor to molest anyone in China.

Hereafter, American ships in Chinese waters should have war-airplanes and aviators aboard, ready to take to the air against Japanese aggressors.

Firemen Clerks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice by the press that some members of the Congressional appropriations committee have made a statement that they believe the District has too many employes and that they receive unusually high pay for the work performed. I believe there are too many employes though I do not believe they receive too much money except in the higher brackets. Much efficiency could be promoted in the District government.

As a clerk in the District Building who is qualified to be a clerk, I receive a little more than half of some clerks' salaries who have never qualified as clerks. I receive $2,400 a year, and all the benefits that go with the hazardous occupation of an actual fire fighter.

Some officials say that they are called back to duty in order to call firemen off duty when large fires occur. Sure, they are, but only a very, very few times a year, and furthermore what fireman wouldn't prefer on a cold, wintry night to come to the District Building and use the telephone to call off-duty firemen than respond for active duty on the fireground? The officials could set aside any number of firemen that are in the companies to come back to call off-duty firemen, or clerks that would replace the firemen clerks would be only too glad to assume this extra responsibility for about $3 extra a month.

Contrasting Views On Anti-Lynch Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How can this country deem itself "one of the great democracies" when in the national legislature a little handful of stubborn reactionaries can frustrate the will of the majority, while it paralyzes public business, obstructs public relief and shames the Nation before the world?

And is it not still more humiliating to Americans and disquieting to Democrats to recall that the objective of these absolutists is to preserve murder as a divine right, to place rule by mobs above rule by law, and the chaos of riotings above the orderly procedure of the courts that are the cornerstone of civilized life?

And is it not to Democrats still more devastating to remember that the maintaining of this savagery is sought for no purpose at bottom but to keep a part of the citizenry of the Republic in economic and political servitude to the rest?

CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL.
Washington, Jan. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under the surface but known to all observant students of Congressional activities there is a malevolent and ever-increasing spirit of sectionalism both in the Senate and House.

It used to be charged, and with some truth, that sectionalism was more prevalent in the South than anywhere else in the Union, but what do we see today? A combination of politicians from all the other States bent on usurpation of the rights of citizens dwelling below the Mason and Dixon line; almost a conspiracy, one might say, to strip from them every vestige of local self-government. Concealed under the false guise of humanitarianism there is the desire to humiliate and oppress.

For years not a single Representative or Senator from the trans-Potomac region has raised his voice in condemnation of citizens in the North and West; the expression "damned Yankee" long ago became obsolete. In return for the development of a broad, nationalistic sentiment on the part of the only homogeneous element of the population, there is presented the narrow and bigoted view, a radical and alien view that spells destruction, if unchecked, to our institutions.

In all good faith, it may be said, if sectionalism and a selfish desire to make votes are not the motives of most who favor the Wagner-Van Nuys bill, why is it that Senator Borah is the only Northerner who opposes it?

E. B. SMITH.
Washington, Jan. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Borah's speech in the Senate and Westbrook Pegler's column, both in opposition to the anti-lynching bill, show clearly the difficulties faced by the Negro.

Pegler represents Northern indifference. The killing of only a dozen Negroes in one year is not worth the time and trouble to press corrective legislation. Yet thousands would plunge this country into war because a dark-skinned race by mistake killed three white men on an American gunboat.

Borah represents those who would terrorize and keep in economic slavery the Negro.

The average poor Southern white man's greatest ambition is to be able to hire one or more Negroes, pay them as little as possible, hold them through threats, sit down and be the boss. The anti-lynching bill will remove the club of terrorism that the poor white holds over the Negro and thereby emancipate him from economic slavery.

The Post Impressionist

A President Chats.

THERE are people who take life in a matter-of-fact spirit. Things occur to them and are gone—often even to recollection. Other persons endow events with the glamour of the unusual. To this latter group incidents are unforgettable, because of all surrounding circumstances.

Several years ago it was my privilege to be employed in one of the Government so-called "front offices" at Washington. In the system of operation these places are regarded by those within and without as departmental control rooms.

In the course of an official day things happen in these places and there is no cameraman at hand to record the major and minor events for posterity's knowing, nor is there present an official appraiser to determine the public-interest merit of a day's proceedings. This condition may account for the air of mystery which so often lingers about them as mists, sometimes, hover over cities and towns, beclouding the prospect. In these portals much is routine as concerns official work, but always spell-binding is the drama of the hours in which the human element is distinct. Once catalogued, what transpires starts the imagination on an excursion of idea gathering and furnishes a stage show at once entertaining.

One morning I preceded the executive staff to duty. Outside it was a cheerless day; but within the four walls of the building occupied, a two-minute drama was enacted. Then it was to be crowded from the stage by other less-glamorous episodes

"Jingle, jingle," intoned the office telephone. It was then 8:15 a. m. I responded to the call with a leap and a bound, little realizing that as a reward I would be participant in an experience which, when retold thereafter, would excite the envy of any hearer. Not often is a plebeian, and especially an employe within the ranks, accorded the privilege of speaking directly with the President.

"This is the White House calling," announced the distant voice. "Is Mr. So-and-So there?" came the inquiring remark. "No," was the response. The operator at the Federal post, recognizing my voice, continued, "Just a moment; I'll see if President Coolidge will speak to you."

Moments seemed to run into an eternity as, all akey, I waited to learn if I, unknown personally to the Chief Executive, would be chosen as the ambassador for the particular mission of the moment.

I next heard the nasal-toned voice of the noted New Englander. "Mr. Woulfe, I want you to look up for me the agricultural index-price figure." (The President at the time was working on his annual message to Congress and wished to bring all statements current.)

"I'll look up the information for you, Mr. President, and send it promptly over to the White House," was the enthusiastic statement. "Don't send it over," the Chief Executive interrupted, "call me back on the phone."

That remark climaxed the conversation at the moment. Steps were taken to acquire the desired fact and complete the commission without any undue loss of time.

The incident set forth anew the reputed characteristic of President Coolidge—his fondness for brevity of interview and desire for dispatch of business without unnecessary ceremony. The experience left me with the impression that the distinguished speaker was, with all his power of office, a personage of marked humility. Further, there was something glorifying in the American system of government which admitted such episodes to take place without signal fanfare.

* * *

Several weeks later I was amidstreet at one of the local downtown intersections. Just ahead I saw President Coolidge afoot, elled in by several Secret Service operatives. The Chief Executive, observing me, took one glance at me and looked away; then, presently, made a second survey. His conduct was highly mystifying. Later, after pondering the incident, it was decided he must have believed me to be the same individual with whom he had chatted over the telephone several days previous.

Other days have come and gone since; other spectacular experiences have been my lot, but the day I chatted with a President of the United States—became for a period one of his aids in transacting national affairs—has rested in recollection as one among the preferred privileges of public service.

LOUIS VARNUM WOULFE.

Two Japanese Boys.

Yoshichika and Tsunechika Tonami, the 12 and 9-year-old sons of an Osaka bookseller, have entered the diplomatic field, perhaps with more success than some of their professional seniors have achieved.

They read in the newspapers of the wounding of the British ambassador to China, Sir Hughe Montgomery Knatchbull-Hugessen, and of the bombing of the American liner, President Hoover.

Then they decided to give up a toy electric train for which their father had given them 10 yen and to devote half of the money to flowers for Sir Hughe, the other half for a similar token of sympathy to the sufferers in the President Hoover bombing.

With this aim in view, they visited the British consulate in Kobe and the office of the American steamship company in the same city, and presented their gifts, with appropriate speeches in each case.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

One More Pint.

THE DRUNKARD can always find money for another pint, and the Italian nation, which has been flaunting its poverty as justification for its warlike conduct, is able to find the price of two new battleships of 35,000 tons each, a dozen new destroyer flotilla leaders and a large number of new submarines. It is a common saying among foreigners in Italy that there is not enough gold behind the lira to fill a tooth, and Mussolini had to go out in person a couple of years ago to ballyhoo a collection of wedding rings, World War medals and little personal trinkets for the gold that was in them.

PEGLER.

Under this plan a woman turned in her wedding ring and received in return a certificate which entitled her to a steel ring inscribed with a patriotic motto. World War widows and gold star mothers were hopped up by the propaganda of professional patriots and the clergy or bullied by neighborhood opinion to the point of giving back to the government medals which had been awarded them in recognition of acts of great bravery by husbands and sons long dead.

• • • •

WHILE THIS CAMPAIGN was at its height, incidentally, I had an interview with a Roman woman who was credited with great personal influence on the Duce, whose home was only a few blocks from her apartment, and noticed that as she lay on her couch suffering from gout and as she praised the self-sacrifice of the women of the peasant and working class she wore on her own wedding finger a ring containing an enormous diamond. My interest in this ring may have made her self-conscious, for after a time she began to toy with it and absently turned it around.

Little yes-men of the regime, very pretty in their beautiful black uniforms and expensive black boots, never tired of telling of the patriotic spirit of sacrifice in the humblest ranks.

"You see those men?" said one of my Fascist friends, pointing to some brick masons on the scaffolding of a new building. "They work from dawn until it is too dark to work any more, and for lunch they do not even leave the scaffold. For lunch they have bread. No sausage. No cheese. Coffee, no. Coffee is $2 a pound. They have meat at home maybe once in a week. For the rest, spaghetti and bread and maybe sometimes cheese. Wine, a little. Not much. Too expensive."

My friend was very proud of the spirit of the masons on the scaffold, but it was not necessary for him to explain, for everyone knew that those men and all the other workmen and peasants had the alternative of staying on their jobs at whatever pay they could get or being drafted into the battalions for Abyssinia.

"We are poor," the Black Shirts continually explain. "We have too many people for our land. We must have colonies."

So they were out grabbing an empire, the ultimate extent of which was shown in a great imaginary map in a public place and finding money for warships and guns and military planes while the masons lunched on bread only and the women gave up their wedding rings and the Duce's friend twirled the diamond on her finger, and the inmates of the over-crowded land were constantly being exhorted by state and church to breed like beasts and increase the congestion.

BUT THEY ALREADY had Libya and had held it for 25 years, and up to that time, as up to now, their development of Libya consisted of a few miles of coastal highway, a hotel, a gambling casino, the garrison and a few groves and farms producing bitter oranges almost unfit for consumption and a small amount of garden truck.

They had come to such a point of shortage of metal that they had collected old pots and skillets, old iron beds and fence railings and scraps of tin so that Abyssinia might be won. After that there would be plenty for all. There was not much of that nonsense about a war of defense in Abyssinia. That was for foreign consumption. At home it was recognized that this was a war for an empire, for land and space and food.

So they took Abyssinia, but the country is not yet subdued or developed, and the expense of occupation, subjugation and development is still enormous. Still they are building battleships, flotilla leaders and submarines, and still the masons have only bread for lunch and meat maybe once a week.

("Congressmen say depression is a business plot."—News item).

I love to see my profits drop
And watch my business go;
How grand to have to close my shop—
It hurts the New Deal so!

I like to see my income crash—
I love a business jar;
I crave the loss of heavy cash—
It hampers F. D. R.!

To ruin me, ah, that's my aim!
For suicide's such fun
When it is done to put the blame
Right up to Washington.

When customers in panic flee
It cheers my very soul;
I just go broke to put, you see,
My country in a hole!

When all is idle day and night
And I am low and flat
I'm satisfied for it will spite
Some great big Democrat!

If I make motor cars, I just Refuse to turn out more
And try my darndest to go "bust"
To make the Jacksons sore.

If I sell stuff like brass or steel
I cry, "No selling done!"
The stockholders all like to feel
We're just in trade for fun.

So, let me to deep ruin slide,
I welcome any plight . . .
How lovely, boys, is suicide
If merely done for spite!

SOLVING A PUZZLE.

The New York Aquarium experts are still puzzled by a new fish that is the same at each end and can swim ahead or in reverse with equal speed. In fact it is impossible to tell when it is in reverse and vice versa. Our advice is to forget it and just assume it is a Congressman who has overdieted and lost his hat.

Women will wear topless bathing suits by 1940, a beauty culture expert predicts. That's allowing three long years to get rid of a bandana handkerchief.

They may get the stock market regulation pretty soon to a point where no investors will be allowed to enter unless accompanied by his parents.

Matsui To Retire

Commander In Chief Of Japanese Expeditionary Forces In Central China Said To Have Lost Control Of Hot-heads.

By Our Tokyo Correspondent. Tokyo.

IN A SENSATIONAL sequel to the Panay incident and the sacking of Nanking, Gen. Iwane Matsui, commander-in-chief of the Japanese expeditionary force in Central China, will soon retire from his post, it has been learned from informed Japanese quarters.

Gen. Matsui, The Post was informed, will plead "ill health," preventing him from giving full attention to the rapidly widening scope of military operations in Central and South China.

The exact date of his resignation will depend upon the success of Japan's diplomats in securing a complete settlement of the Panay and Ladybird incidents. Every effort will be made to avoid the implication that Gen. Matsui is being removed in punishment for the aerial attacks on American and British warships and merchantmen near Nanking on December 12.

No action will be taken by the army until the incidents are "settled and forgotten," it was emphasized. On his retirement Gen. Matsui will be made a baron.

Lieut. Gen. Prince Naruhiko Higashikuni, a member of the imperial family and a supreme war councilor, was regarded by The Post's informant as the most probable successor to Gen. Matsui. Well known as a strict disciplinarian, Prince Higashikuni was expected to pay especial attention to checking the activities of the so-called "younger officers' clique," which was considered by Tokyo to be responsible for the grave international incidents which attended the occupation of Nanking.

Higashikuni Received French Military Training.

BORN 50 years ago, Prince Higashikuni began his military career in 1908 and studied military science in France between 1920 and 1927. While a regimental commander in the turbulent days of 1931-32, the prince was reported to have been indirectly involved in the ultra-nationalist movement.

During the military mutiny of February 26, 1936, Prince Higashikuni commanded the Fourth Division in Osaka. It was widely rumored in Japan at the time that the prince would lead his troops to Tokyo to aid the rebellious regiments of the First and Third Divisions. Although the reports were apparently entirely unfounded the navy gave them sufficient credence to concentrate a part of the battle fleet in Osaka Bay.

No longer popular with the "younger officers," Prince Higashikuni was expected by The Post's informant to be able to rein the unmanageable elements by virtue of his prestige as a member of the imperial family.

The decision to replace Gen. Matsui was reached by the army leaders in Tokyo very soon after the Panay incident, when the general's professed inability to control the younger officers led to the postponement of an attack on Canton, scheduled for December 20. Hurried preparations in Shanghai to transport thousands of troops necessary for a major campaign in South China were abruptly halted when the high command of the army realized that it was no longer in full control of its officers.

Specifically mentioned by The Post's informant as possibilities were:

1. The serious involvement with Great Britain in case of a deliberate violation of the extensive British rights and interests in South China; and

2. The possibility of entire victory-flushed divisions disregarding restraining orders and driving into the mountainous areas in Kiangsi and Hunan so fast as to lose contact with the coastal bases.

"We do not except," The Post's informant said, "the possibilities of a lost division—ambushed and rapidly annihilated in the mountains of South China."

Replacement Of Matsui Closes Amazing Chapter.

THE REPLACEMENT of Gen. Matsui will bring to a climax one of the most amazing chapters in the eventful annals of the Japanese army. It will also serve to thrust into limelight the dangers of unrestrained, uniformed patriotism.

The existence of the "younger officers' clique" has been a matter of record since the amputation of Manchuria. Closely bound with the impoverished peasantry and bitterly dissatisfied with the existing system of promotions, the younger officers became advocates of direct action to sweep away corrupt bureaucracy and capitalism and of an energetic empire-building program on the mainland.

The occupation of Manchuria was followed by a series of assassinations of politicians and bankers in Japan. The mild sentences imposed by the courts served to embolden the patriotic officers.

Given an opportunity to put into effect their political, economic and military ideas in Manchuria, the younger officers soon ruled supreme in the Kwantung army, which patrols the new empire's strife-torn border with Soviet Russia, Outer and Inner Mongolias and China. Repeated efforts of the high command in Tokyo to regain control of the Kwantung army were largely ineffective.

The abortive revolt of 1,400 men and officers here on February 26, 1936, curiously enough further enhanced the younger officers' power; for although a few ringleaders were shot, the actual guiding spirits of the movement, such as Gen. J. Mazaki and Col. K. Hashimoto, were set free.

When the current war was launched last July the younger officers felt that their chance had come. A program strongly reminiscent of fascism was put into effect at home, while on the mainland the army began to translate its fondest dreams into stark reality.

With the extreme scarcity of high officers in Japan it was the colonels and lieutenant colonels who were in actual charge of the military operations. Many of these, put on the retired list following the mutiny of 1936, were recalled to colors. Among them was Col. Hashimoto, one of the spiritual leaders of the coup, and many officers and men convicted of political assassination.

Looting Of Nanking Followed Panay Incident.

CONTEMPTUOUS of the Chinese and bitterly opposed to all democratic powers, the younger officers soon discovered that there was apparently no check, domestic or foreign, upon their activities. This realization, coupled with the excitement of war and the soldiers' desire to give vent to pent-up emotions, led to the Panay and Ladybird incidents and the frightful orgy of looting, killing and rapine in Nanking.

Col. Hashimoto, who was in charge of the troops in Wuhu, above Nanking, was subsequently chosen by the army command as the scapegoat. But great though his responsibility was, his guilt was shared by a vast majority of the Japanese officers in the field in Central China.

What transpired in Nanking following its seizure by the Japanese has partly been reported by a few newspapermen who remained in the city until December 14. But reports of still greater atrocities leaked out of the abandoned capital in the fortnight that followed.

Day after day, Chinese soldiers and civilians alike were tied up with wire in batches of from 30 to 50 men and led off to Hsiakwan, on the Yangtze River, where they were mown down by machine guns. Japanese soldiers were seen by foreigners parading in the streets with Chinese heads stuck on their bayonets. Other severed heads were seen with cigarette butts in their mouths or cartridges in their nostrils. Every house in Nanking was searched and looted. Even foreign property and nationals did not escape the general fate.

All comely women were taken off to an unknown destination, from which none of them ever returned. A missionary has had his diplomatic tact tested to the full when he rejected a demand for the supply of girls to Japanese soldiers. From villages and towns between Shanghai and Nanking came similar reports of girls and young women disappearing without trace after being led off by Japanese troops.

Young Officers Allowed Soldiers To Wreak Havoc.

APPARENTLY anxious to maintain their hold on the soldiers, the younger officers, it was reported here from China, made no effort to halt these depredations. The general knowledge of the independence enjoyed by the officers obviously also played its role in undermining discipline.

Faced with what amounted to a complete collapse of discipline in the rank and file of the army units in Central China, Gen. Matsui, it was disclosed, took two steps. The first was to inform Tokyo that he was unable to control the younger officers and was, therefore, unable to remain in command.

The second, and a more curious move, was to supply a pro-Japanese American newspaperman with an exclusive report of the Nanking tragedy and the situation caused by the actions of the younger officers.

The step was apparently intended to clear Gen. Matsui of all responsibility for the deplorable situation in Central China and simultaneously to force Tokyo to take strong action against the younger officers.

The next few months will not only loom important in the history of China, but also will test the internal strength of the Japanese army and, possibly, cast their shadow upon Nippon's imperial policies.

THE PROBLEMS, practices and philosophies of trade unionism in the United States have been reduced to comprehensible form in "When Labor Organizes," by Robert R. R. Brooks.

Prof. Brooks maintains a nonpartisan attitude as he sees through the confusion of conflicting stories and propaganda arising out of industrial unrest and provides laymen with a clear discussion of the "how" and "why" behind membership drives, collective agreements, business policies, welfare programs, leadership, political action, labor racketeering and other matters of concern to organized wage-earners.

While its mistakes are exposed along with its achievements, the labor movement gains in dignity through Prof. Brooks' exposition. It is recognized not merely as a struggle of the oppressed for a larger share of this world's material goods, but rather as a consistent effort "to reassert the forms and practices of democracy in an industrialized society." It is implied that the organization of labor in all crafts and industries may presage the development of a system of economic representation which eventually will displace geographical representation for political purposes.

• • • •

THE AUTHOR HAS NO ILLUSIONS. Pragmatically, he credits labor organizations with little more than self-interest as their principal motivating force; but the fruits of labor's self interest, he argues, may be consistent with the well-being of society generally.

Suppose, as Prof. Brooks suggests, the labor movement should come to include 25,000,000 people with an average of two dependents each. What policies would self-interest lead them to adopt? Genuine unemployment insurance, higher wages for all, a maximum of goods and a minimum of toil are only a few of the ready answers evident from an examination of the present program of labor.

Are these policies consonant with social well-being? Prof. Brooks argues in the affirmative. The establishment of minimum wages in competitive industries, he says, for example, "eliminates the relatively inefficient firms and concentrates production in the establishments which can afford to pay 'living wages.' It also eliminates the inefficient workers and forces society to recognize them as substandard or underprivileged groups which can be removed only by such remedial or preventative techniques as old-age pensions, more extensive liberal and technical education, hospitalization for the physically and mentally unfit, vocational rehabilitation and so on."

• • • •

PARTICULARLY GOOD in "When Labor Organizes" is the analysis of the problems of labor leadership. While he is not blind to the racketeers and deadbeats who are still to be found in abundance within labor's officialdom, Prof. Brooks reports that the quality of union leadership has improved more steadily in recent years than the quality of business leadership.

"Leaders influence the development of the institution," the author observes, "but the movement creates the leaders. Under the domination of restrictive craft policies and subject to the conservative conditions of the twenties, organized labor was a declining institution. This was due partly to inferior leadership, but the inferior leadership was basically a reflection of the economic and social conditions which led to the decline of the movement as a whole. The crises of the depression, its corrosive effects upon other social institutions, the realignment of political forces and the smashing of many of the important social beliefs gave new life to the labor movement." . . . The labor movement is developing new and better leaders from its midst and is attracting from the outside others who, a few years ago, might have gone into business. It is already drawing upon the colleges, the law schools, the scientific schools and the government services for its organizers and its technicians. Some of these recruits will move from technical to political functions within the labor movement and rise to posts of national leadership."

• • • •

Prof. Brooks' work as a whole is a pleasant mixture of gossip, philosophy and membership statistics. His style is lucid. He illustrates his arguments and history with plenty of narratives and anecdotes. His work merits the attention of unionists, students, employes, government officials and all who are interested in the important problems of an evolving society.

No Cheap Potatoes

There is too much food in Michigan. Of course, that is not saying that everyone in Michigan has an abundance. But Michigan potatoes are good food. The associations of potato growers proclaim that proudly. And now it is agreed—by some farmers and Federal officials—that there are too many potatoes.

So, just like the six million little pigs that got in the way of progress a few years ago, the potatoes have to be sacrificed. An official of the United States Government has made agreements with 8,000 Michigan farmers. The farmers are to destroy or in some other way get rid of 709,854 bushels of good merchantable potatoes. The potatoes must not go to market. And the Government is going to spend about $107,000 to ease the consciences of the farmers who waste the food.

Farm organizations often express their disapproval of unscrupulous business interests that form combinations in restraint of trade for the purpose of keeping up prices. And the Government just recently has been studying the ways of business concerns with a view to bringing into court those who make such agreements.

But, anyway, people who have been depending on Michigan's fine potato crop to keep down the cost of living this winter will need to revise budget estimates.

Street Lighting Fund Transfer Wins Approval

Indicated Inclusion in D.C. Budget Will Bring Fight on Floor.

Approval of transfer of the $785,000 street lighting cost from the general revenue fund to the highway fund was indicated by the House sub-committee on District appropriations yesterday following a hearing on highway and electrical department estimates.

At the same time Chairman Collins reiterated his indorsement of the K street viaduct proposal as against a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge.

As there was no opposition to the proposed underpass at Dupont Circle, the chairman indicated it would be included in the supply bill when reported.

Most of the other highway projects, several of which are intended to facilitate flow of traffic, were given informal approval by the sub-committee. The members appeared divided, however, on the K street viaduct, which the Budget Bureau did not recommend, and the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, which it did include in the budget.

The street lighting fund transfer is due to start a row on the House floor as several highway-minded members have warned that they will oppose it.

The members, including Representatives Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Cartwright, also an Oklahoma Democrat, chairman of the Roads Committee, assert that it will endanger the District's chance of being included in any Federal highway aid fund that may be appropriated.

The sub-committee this afternoon will consider estimates of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Ntaional Capital Parks office and the District's share in costs of the United States District Court and the Court of Appeals.

'Gas' Price Exhibits Scored by Defense

Madison, Wis., Jan. 11 (AP).—The defense in the Federal Government's gasoline price-fixing case struck at Government price exhibits today as its final witness took the stand.

James D. Miller, New York accountant, declared he had found numerous errors in prosecution charts comparing with the published quotations, the prices at which major oil companies purchased gasoline from independent refiners in 1935 and 1936.

During these years the Government charged 16 oil companies and 37 individuals conspired to rig the Midwestern prices by buying independents' gasoline at high, artificial prices.

Two Policemen Fined by Board For Drinking

3 Eggnogs Christmas Eve Cost Poquette $100; Dunawin Pays $200.

Three glasses of eggnog, which he admitted drinking Christmas Eve, cost Policeman Ralph J. Poquette $100 yesterday. He was found guilty of intoxication charges by the Police Trial Board.

Poquette, attached to the Eleventh Precinct, was suspended by Lieut. William J. Cunningham because "he used big words and appeared unfit for duty."

When two tires on the patrol car he was driving went flat, Poquette testified yesterday, he reported to the station house and related the car's condition to Cunningham.

Drank 3 Eggnogs.

Although Cunningham said Poquette staggered when he walked across the station floor, only one other witness corroborated this statement. Acting Sergt. Archie B. Dixon reluctantly said he thought Poquette "was in no condition to perform police duties."

Arrested and suspended about 3 a. m., Poquette admitted yesterday he had consumed three glasses of eggnog at his home about 9 p. m. the same night. The drinks, he said, were taken before he reported for midnight duty.

Poquette speaks Spanish and said he jokingly read a police report in that language to Cunningham a few moments before he was suspended. In explaining the "big words" described by Cunningham, Poquette testified he said while being stripped of his equipment:

"If you (Cunningham) feel it incumbent upon you to suspend me, I guess I have no other recourse but to accept."

Another Also Fined.

Under cross-examination by Assistant Corporation Counsel Ted Welliver and members of the board, the accused policeman recited in detail all his activities the night he was charged.

Several other policemen testified as defense witnesses, said Poquette did not appear to be intoxicated and acted "normal."

Pvt. Walter M. Dunawin, assigned to duty in front of Police Court, pleaded guilty to intoxication charges and was fined $200.

Alimony Tax Free, Appeals Body Says

The Board of Tax Appeals used three words yesterday to rule on whether income received by a divorced woman as alimony is taxable.

"It is not," the board said. The case involved a deficiency assessment against Princess Lida of Thurn and Taxis amounting to $32,393 plus penalties for $13,930.

The princess, a citizen of Hungary, was married in the United States in 1899 to Gerald P. Fitzgerald, of Uniontown, Pa. They were divorced in 1907.

Tom McCarthy

More About The Forger With A New Racket.

McCARTHY.

LATER, he "crabbed" about it, and told me why he figured crime didn't pay. And he told me about his wife, and the hell of having to kick around in a prison through the years in which he might have been building something.

But when he told me the story of how he broke into the game which can't be won, he told it coldly. He wanted to tell the facts, and as he said, "I don't want to slop over."

"It's the darnedest thing," he said. "Maybe, I was just born crooked, but I don't think so. The thing that got me into my forgery racket was like something you read about in those personal-advice columns in the paper."

Sitting in an office of the Federal Penitentiary at Lorton, Va., he'd told me how he learned the trick of forging another's name, just to have something to show the kids at school. But he hadn't told me how he'd gone crooked.

"I'm not holding back," he said. "And I'm not trying to look good. After I got out of high school I hopped up to Chicago to set the world on fire. But I didn't. Then, I remembered how to forge a name. I did it . . . but this time for dough. I put it on a check.

"I got caught the first time, and my folks were notified. They were fairly influential, and they could have got me off. But they didn't. My old man had ideas about sparing the rod and spoiling the child. He let me go to jail for 90 days.

"Frankly, I don't think it hurt me. I came back to the home town to start over. I meant to go straight And for a while I thought I was going to make it.

* * * *

"THE OLD MAN got me a job in a store, and I was doing alright. I married a swell kid. A nice girl, and I'm not fooling. She taught school. Well, here's where I get to the part of the story that's like one of those problems you read about in the advice column. When you read them you think they're silly.

"The depression came along, and the store tightened up. I was one of the guys to get the gate. Then I went home, and lived off my wife's $100-a-month job as school teacher. And it sort of got me.

"I couldn't find a job. And maybe I didn't look hard enough. You can draw any conclusion you want as to that.

"But the thing was, I was living off my wife. It made me sore—and I felt a lot of crazy stuff about . . . self-respect. Anyhow, I got fed up.

"Remember now, this kid I was married to was a school teacher," he said, "and that point will stand up under checking." It did.

But when I said to her let's go, let's get out of here, she just said, 'O. K. mister if that's what you want.' We had about twenty bucks in the house, and we took that. We rode a bus as far as $20 would carry us.

Then I began to push paper in earnest. And I doped out a new wrinkle for the old time racket of forgery. Within a year I was driving a $3,000 car and we were staying at the best resort hotels in the country.

* * * *

"RIGHT NOW," he said, "I'm going to tell you how I worked out the racket which paid me $60,000 in less than three years. It's so simple that you'll be amazed that it could pay me such dividends. But I worked it successfully in almost every city in the country, with a population of more than 30,000.

"I didn't have to be smart to work it. People were so careless that they almost threw money at me. I normally worked only five or six days a month, for reasons I'll explain in a minute. But it was a bad month when I didn't take at least $1,500 in those few days.

"I'm not trying to pretty it up, and to give you the picture, I'll call things by their right names. I was simply a forger, who saw the advantage of being a mail box thief as well.

"In order to get the thing across to you I'll run through the actual routine of the few days of the month in which I worked. When the calendar edged toward the first of another month, I'd check out of wherever I happened to have been staying, and head for a good sized town.

"I'd register with my wife at a good hotel, put my car away for a couple of days and set to work. I'd find a section of the city in which there were a number of apartment houses in a small area.

"I'd walk from one to another checking which ones had the type of mail box from which letters could be easily extracted. In some of the buildings the boxes were open so that anyone could merely reach in and remove the mail. Then if the boxes didn't offer much in the line of mail, I'd wait for the postman.

"I'd actually follow him on his rounds. When I'd enter the lobby of an apartment I'd pretend to be searching for a name on one of the mail boxes. All the time, if the coast were clear, I'd be tossing mail into a portfolio I carried.

* * * *

"I DIDN'T take just any sort of mail. I wasn't interested in personal letters. I grabbed off the bills from the various department stores, easily recognizable because the firm name had been printed in the corner of the window-envelope. State and city motor vehicle titles and license receipts were duck soup. They had the State or city seal on the envelope. Bank statements and canceled checks were the easiest of the lot. Usually they came in long manila envelopes—and because they were so long, they protruded from the box.

"To me this seems sort of silly. It was too easy. They call me a crook. They're right. Or at least they were.

"But why must smart people be so stupid? They allow their mail to lie around as though it weren't worth anything? They use open mailboxes which the postman stuffs with letters more valuable than $10 bills.

"I'll tell you what I did with that stolen mail! It paid me more than I'd have got if they'd left currency in their boxes. That collection of stolen mail, gave me an income of close to $20,000 a year, though the people who failed to protect it, didn't figure it was worth the price of a locked mailbox."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Culbertson System—1938.

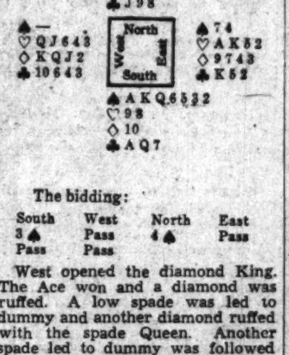
As announced yesterday and the day previous, asking bids have been relegated to a minor place in the Culbertson System for 1938. Since the bids are technically excellent, advanced players will undoubtedly continue to use them with experienced partners; in fact, we recommend this course, and will continue to devote space in new literature to explanation of the asking bids. Since they will not be a basic part of the system, however, players who use them will have to announce their use to their adversaries.

Obviously, the change affects the two-way three bid. After an opening three bid, slam tries will be of a direct nature, or through the use of the four-five notrump convention, rather than asking bids. Incidentally, the four-five notrump convention will never be dropped from the Culbertson System. It is by all odds the most perfect and most vital slam device ever invented. Certainly it is the most popular, since more than 90 per cent of players use it.

The free bid of five notrump (grand slam force) cannot be so highly praised. Despite its technical excellence, it is arbitrary, difficult to learn and to remember, and easily forgotten because it is so seldom used. Therefore out it goes, to be placed in that appendix alongside of the asking bids, and to be used only by expert partnerships when they have previously announced its meaning to their opponents.

Today's Hand.

Match-point Duplicate.
South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the diamond King. The Ace won and a diamond was ruffed. A low spade was led to dummy and another diamond ruffed with the spade Queen. Another spade led to dummy was followed by the ruff of the last diamond. Now, declarer merely excited with a heart. That the defenders were in a hopeless position is obvious. Actually it did not matter which of them won the heart trick because a club lead from either would be fatal.

As it happened, West won with the heart Jack, and returned a heart. East, now on lead, could only return a club which, allowed to ride to the Jack, meant no club losers for the declarer. Had East returned a heart the result would have been the same. Dummy could have ruffed while declarer was discarding his low club, and a club finesse then would have accounted for the remaining tricks.

Officials Deny Hiding Pact at '33 Rail Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

Officials of Penroad Corporation and the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railway disputed yesterday the contention of Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, that the two companies had "concealed" evidence from a 1933 Senate investigation.

Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Railroad Finance Committee, asserted witnesses for the two companies had denied in 1933 existence of a written agreement because of features in it which they thought "objectionable."

Frank E. Taplin, of Cleveland, president of the railway company; A. J. County, Pennroad director, and S. H. Ogden were asked in turn yesterday whether a written agreement was made to cover the $8,000,000 sale of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia to Pennroad in 1929.

All Deny Knowledge.

Each said he had never seen any written agreement. Wheeler showed them a document labeled "memorandum," setting forth terms of the sale and signed by H. H. Lee, Pennroad president, and C. F. Taplin, the latter signing on behalf of Frank E. Taplin, his brother.

Frank E. Taplin headed a syndicate which sold the railway to Pennroad and C. F. Taplin, his brother, was attorney for the syndicate.

Frank Taplin told Wheeler yesterday was "the first time I ever set eyes on" the memorandum. He said he first heard of its existence about two years ago but was unable to obtain a copy of it either from his brother or from Lee. County said he had known nothing of the sale agreement and Ogden said he had not seen the memorandum before.

Terms of the agreement, which Taplin conceded incorporated his instructions to his brother and were carried out in detail, provided no commission should be paid for the sale to either Kuhn, Loeb & Co., or to C. H. Huston, former chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Taplin said he had talked to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. about the sale and that Huston's name was mentioned. As a result he said, he feared the bank or Huston might claim a commission.

Huston, Taplin asserted, "gyps a commission out of anybody he has anything to do with and I didn't want him butting into this thing."

Taplin contended the sale agreement, as far as he was concerned, was "entirely oral" with W. W. Atterbury, then president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. He agreed his brother often had signed his name in his capacity as attorney.

C. B. Helserman, former general counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad, said the brothers had "quarreled."

Unidentified Man Slain on Yacht Is Given Two Names

Miami, Jan. 11 (AP).—A macabre nautical snarl was presented to police today when an unidentified man was found shot to death in a cabin of a world-cruising yacht.

A sailor on the 45-foot boat, Scouter, identified the body as that of Arthur A. Lawrence, of Pittsburgh, 48-year-old master of the boat. But William R. Kirschner, of Miami, told police the man was Robert Revere, whom he had known several years.

Police are seeking Moses Mohamed, also known as Musa Shalabi, 42, a Syrian believed to have entered this country illegally on the craft.

New Cocktail Spot Is Opened At Burlington

Old Mexican Room Has Complete Rio Grande Atmosphere.

By Chanticleer

There's something brand new opening at the Burlington Hotel for your cycle of night stepping. It's the Old Mexican Room, a cocktail lounge with colorful rural scenes of Old Mexico with markets, cockfights, fruit vendors, even furniture and lighting imported from south of the Rio Grande. Starting Thursday, Ray Nelson will furnish music on banjo and guitar from 4 to 7 daily.

Another favorite cocktail rendezvous, the Anchor room at the Annapolis Hotel, has Ward DuVall, talented accordionist singer. Known as the "gypsy minstrel of the air," he has been featured by Columbia three times weekly for the past year.

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, took a bow in the Pall Mall room of the Raleigh Monday night when Eddie Daniels played "Oh Susanna." Another gentleman for whom Eddie played several request numbers turned out to be from Eddie's home town, Boston.

Another Wednesday night party is looming, January 19 is "Circus Daze" with all the clowns, balloons, n'everything.

A couple of fast-stepping, clever fellows known as Mirth and Mack are topping the current entertainment in the Blue Room at the Shoreham this week. Mirth and Mack, Rudy Vallee proteges, have what it takes—a certain something that puts them in the success class.

The four McNallie Sisters are as pretty, youthful and genuine a foursome as you could find anywhere. Really sisters, each has a distinctly different appeal and personality. They sing, dance and make merry. There is also Leonidoff, of the strong and hearty voice and, of course, Maxim Lowe's music, with Barnee directing.

"Those wedding bells are breaking up that old gang of mine" is what Johnny Shaw's boys at the Madrillon are getting ready to play. The reason is that Hugh Bartman, who plays the bass fiddle in the band, is on his way to the altar, Wednesday, I believe.

Have you heard the Stull Lisee duo at the Mayflower. It took a lot of rehearsing to get together the way they do. They get a big hand, too, something unusual in Washington. Then, too, there is the ultra-moderne (yes, he uses the additional "e") magic supplied by Otis Manning.

At the Ambassador's Hi-Hat, Washington's only singing headwaiter is doing a number of novelty numbers in addition to entertainment furnished by the regular merrymakers.

There's a new floor offering at the Bamboo Gardens that is fast and different. One feature, a team of roller skaters, provides a new type of dizzy entertainment. Billy Dales, a juggler who really is good, stops at the Bamboo Gardens this week before going on to New York.

Their present M. C., Billy McIntyre, is one of the cleverest in the business. Billy, well known to Washingtonians, has a long string of record-breaking runs at most of the best spots here and in Chicago.

Experts Favor Unit to Rule All Civil Aviation

Special Study Group Plans Body to Take Over Three Bureaus.

A complete revolution in control of rates, regulation of safety practices and financial aid to the aviation industry will be recommended shortly by the interdepartmental committee on civil aviation legislation, it was learned last night.

A tentative draft of the document already has been sent to President Roosevelt, who has turned it over to Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, members of the committee said.

They explained that the group had decided to recommend creation of a new regulatory commission of three members to have supervision over the entire American aviation industry.

The interdepartmental committee is composed of J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce; R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department; Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War; Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General.

Its report will recommend that the regulation of safety, determination of air mail rates and provisions of financial aid for existing air lines would all become part of the duties of the new regulatory body.

If these proposals are adopted, it was explained by an interdepartmental member, commercial lines would be permitted to engage in air transport operations only after obtaining "certificates of convenience and necessity," as now required by the Interstate Commerce Commission for railroads.

McKellar to Fight.

He also said that the issuance of pilots' licenses or "certificates of competency" would be placed under authority of the new body.

The proposals would unite functions of the Bureau of Air Commerce, the regulation of rates now exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the handling of air-mail contracts by the Post-office Department all in the hands of the new commission.

It is expected to be attacked bitterly by Senator Kenneth McKellar, chairman of the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, who has opposed all legislation to remove financial power over aviation operations from the Postoffice Department.

Philadelphia, Jan. 11 (AP).—A cargo of aerial bombs, the first shipment of an order totaling 2,500 tons, was loaded on the German steamship Crefeld today in the Delaware River off Essington.

U.S. Air Defense Is Inadequate, Experts Warn

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 11.—Four outstanding aviation experts tonight voiced warnings that the Nation may find itself inadequately equipped with armed aircraft and personnel if war comes.

Speaking before the first national aeronautic planning conference, called to co-ordinate all flying activity in the United States, Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews said "we are woefully short of our requirements in both officers and enlisted men."

In charge of the general headquarters air force, Gen. Andrews also recommended expanded airports and airways flying aids to permit readier movement of war planes in emergencies.

Similar beliefs were expressed by James Doolittle, speed and research flier; Comdr. Charles E. Rosendahl, of the Lakehurst Naval Air Station, and Col. Melvin Maas, flying Congressman and member of the Marine Corps Aviation Reserve.

The conference is expected to go on record at its closing session tomorrow in favor of some sort of Government subsidy for military flight training in colleges and universities.

Col. Maas, Representative from Minnesota, told the conference:

"With our present complement of airplanes, the United States could not defend itself against attack."

Doolittle, former Army flier, said: "Where, two years ago, we had the best military planes in the world, we now not only have fewer planes, but in certain cases our military planes are inferior to those of other great nations."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra (assisted by the Choral Society of the University of Pennsylvania and Selma Amanski, soprano) in Constitution Hall Tuesday evening. Program: Passacaglia (Buxtehude), Symphony No. 3, "A Tragic Cycle" (Harl McDonald), "Prelude a l'Apres-midi d'un Faune" (Debussy), "Pictures at an Exhibition" (Musorgski-Calliet).

Presented as the major work at the third Washington concert of the season by the Philadelphia Orchestra last evening, Harl McDonald's third symphony proved itself worthy of that distinction by the breadth and solidity of its structure, the power of its emotional motivation, and the sustention of a tragic theme with consistent dignity. Utilizing as its subject matter selected verses from "The Lamentations of Fu Hsuan," the composition is scored for orchestra, mixed chorus and solo soprano, and the writing, both for instruments and voices, is the most masterly that Dr. McDonald has thus far achieved.

Ostensibly Chinese in the provenance of the basic ideational material, the music voices a plaint of loneliness universal in human experience. It would have been easy for the composer to have imposed a superficial exoticism by the use of the pentatonic scale and other characteristics of Oriental idiom, but he chose the more difficult way with admirable results. What he has expressed is the essential mood of the poem—a fatalism aware of helplessness before the inscrutable dictates of the gods. Sighs of solitude, tears of grieving, despair of utter abandonment, and terror of the spirit amid seemingly inimical forces are of no avail.

Structurally the work is continuously interesting, for all the thematic ideas are stated in the first movement, and one's attention is held by the devious ways in which the material is manipulated in the other three sections. This handling is skillful in the extreme, as there is no monotony in expression despite the unrelieved melancholy of the emotional tone. The choral writing is remarkably effective inasmuch as the voices are for the most part treated as instrumental timbres, and some extraordinary combinations are produced.

Not so commendable is the role given to the solo soprano, who frequently has the ungrateful task of singing fortissimo against the full orchestra and chorus. This is detrimental to beauty of tone, and detracts from the esthetic effect. In the quiet passages, Selma Amanski disclosed attractive vocal qualities. The University of Pennsylvania chorus, trained to niceties of dynamics by Dr. McDonald, was alert to every cue and pleasurable in tonal blending.

Eugene Ormandy, poised and authoritative, opened the concert with a thoroughly enjoyable passacaglia by Dietrich Buxtehude, deftly orchestrated by Lucien Calliliet. Listening to this music, at once so sturdily practical and so spiritually sincere, one realizes how much Bach learned from the Swedish composer and what rewards he had for his 230-mile walk from Arnstadt to Luebeck.

The second half of the program brought forward the familiar charms of Debussy's prelude to Mallarme's "L'Apres-midi d'un Faune," and Lucien Calliliet's transcription of Musorgski's piano suite, "Pictures at an Exhibition." Differing radically from Ravel's instrumentation, this version emphasizes the boisterousness and rough humor of Musorgski. Adroit and colorful as this arrangement is, one questions the value of such magnifications in which the original contours and tints are distorted and thrown out of proportion.

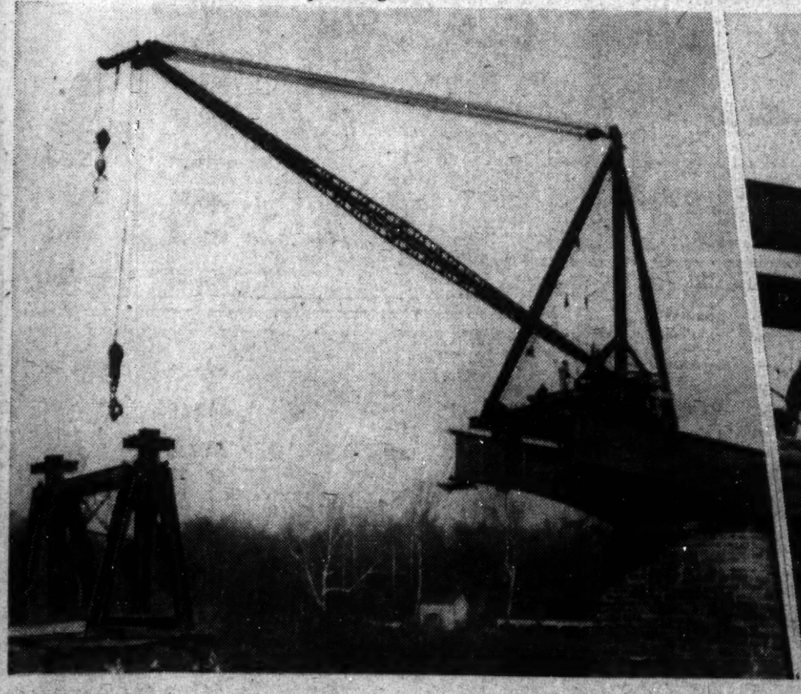
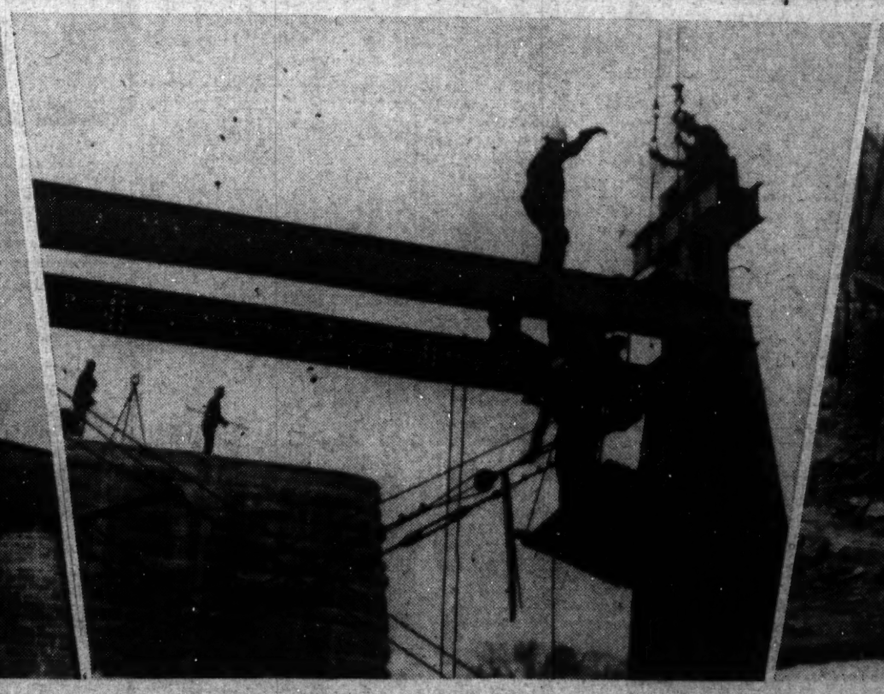
New Chain Bridge Stretches Toward Virginia Shore



Post Staff Photos.

1 Steel work on the new Chain Bridge linking the District with Virginia began last month and has been progressing rapidly. Above, a "frame bent" is being set in place, to which the next span will be anchored. Spans are made up of sectional girders weighing between 25 and 35 tons.



2 A District engineer stands with his transit on the pier in the distance ready to sight the setting location for a "bent." Nimble-footed steel workers are speeding this phase of construction as the bridge is scheduled for completion by June 11.

3 This view shows progress made from the District approach which has been eased to allow more room for automobiles. The roadway of the new bridge will be 10 feet wider than the old one. In addition, there will be a 5-foot sidewalk on each side. The approaches of the old bridge, which withstood many floods, were considered dangerous.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Four Girls, 'Around 25,' Complain That Men the Same Age Are All Appropriated by Older Women.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some girl friends and I have been discussing a situation which seems to exist here in Washington—perhaps in other places, too, but especially here, where there are so many more women than men—and we should very much like to have an expression from you on the subject. There are four of us, all around 25, normal, healthy, intelligent, educated American girls with certainly average looks and personality. We all have fair positions and enjoy our work, but we have a normal desire to marry and to have homes and families of our own.

* * * *

None of us has been in Washington a great length of time, and so far, eligible men have been scarce. I say "eligible" advisedly, for there appear to be any number of self-styled "misunderstood" married men available. We have, however, met a few young men around our own ages who could be lots of fun. But in almost every instance these men have been and are being appropriated by older women.

* * * *

These women are from 7 to 12 years older than the boys, but they have good positions, can afford to dress unusually well, have their own homes or apartments and cars, and don't mind paying the entertainment bills in many cases, just in order to have escorts. They apparently have absolutely no intention of marrying these boys, yet they spoil and flatter them and monopolize their time and attention, not even giving them a chance to meet, let alone know, girls their own ages.

* * * *

It doesn't seem quite fair, yet we don't know what can be done about these cradle-snatching old girls. Have you any suggestions? Certainly, the incongruity of their gray or dyed (yet perfectly coiffed) locks usually slightly overly made-up faces and necks, and their kittenish efforts to be as young as their escorts, and the fact that they might appear a little ridiculous to others, doesn't stop them. Very truly yours. WE FOUR.

What to Believe.

DEAR W. F.: In your eyes, perhaps, "these cradle-snatching old girls" may appear to be slightly ridiculous, but I wonder if your vision isn't jaundiced by envy. According to your estimate of their ages, they can't be older than 37 at the outside, and that isn't such an advanced age, after all. I think it is pretty generally conceded that the thirties are the most attractive decade in the average woman's life, if she has any intelligence, spirit or charm at all. By that time, she has developed a technique of graceful, easy self-government; she knows how to manage herself, socially and emotionally, and she brings a disarming, reassuring, soothing sort of objectivity to her relationships with men.

* * * *

She has learned how to play up her good points, and play down the bad ones; she has acquired some sort of a sense of humor; she has a realistic understanding of men and can talk their language and share their point of view on life and its problems; she knows how to be sweetheart, comrade or friend, and intuitively dopes out almost at first meeting just which of the three a man is looking for in a feminine social partner; she is willing to play the social game more or less on the man's terms, and is clever enough to convince him that marriage is the furthest thing from her mind.

* * * *

In other words, she knows how to put a man at ease in her company, without diminishing his good opinion of her as a person or as a woman. Because she generally is socially and economically self-sufficient to greater degree than girls in their twenties, she doesn't make the same disturbing demands upon him that the latter is apt to make. She can take him or leave him, a fact which he gratefully appreciates. The average youth in his twenties wants stimulating feminine companionship, but nowadays, at least, with the economic situation what it is, he can seldom afford to spend a great deal on amusements and he has an almost bitter necessity to avoid any social alliance which might lead to immediate marriage.

More than that, of course, a great many young men who haven't found their sea-legs, socially, who feel somewhat at a loss in the company of girls their own age, find themselves surprisingly at ease with older women who have the good sense to treat them in an elder-sisterly sort of way.

* * * *

All of which is by way of saying that these older rivals of yours aren't half so predatory as you choose to believe. It's simply that they have turned years and experience to profit, and in losing their peach-bloom youth have attained compensatory attractions which stand them, in social ways, in equally good stead. And while they seem ridiculous and kittenish in your eyes, you may seem equally without charm to them. The kindlier minds amongst them probably feel a sympathetic pity for you in that you don't know how to go after what you want. You stand back, hoping that life will dump rich gifts into your life, will leave love and a husband on your doorstep, when you should be busy cultivating the soil of circumstance and planting the seed of opportunity.

* * * *

Since you and your friends are comparative newcomers to Washington, why don't you employ such expedients for meeting men, as joining your respective State societies; enrolling in night classes of study at local universities; becoming members of a lively young people's church group; going in for outdoor sports, such as golf and tennis, obtaining membership in reputable sororities (such as might develop through matriculating from the aforementioned university courses), and so on. Naturally, the sorority membership wouldn't bring you into contact with men immediately, but girls of the sorority type usually do lead a spirited social life, and you would be opening up avenues leading to introductions to brothers, beaux and casual boy friends.

* * * *

I am convinced of one thing—your problem is not to be solved by aiming invectives at your more socially experienced, older, beau-snatching rivals. If you will stop sneering at these rivals, and devote yourselves instead to a serious, analytical study of their men-managing technique, you may get somewhere. It's a sad mistake to underestimate the ammunition of the enemy. The thing to do is to find what it consists of, and how you can get it for yourself. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

In This Attire They Influenced Men—And History

BELOW, is a replica of a gown worn by Baroness Vetsera, beloved of Rudolph of Austria who died with him at Mayerling. Note basque bodice, bow trimming, and bonnet hat tied under chin, which are features of styles today. Right, an ensemble copied from tthe wardrobe of the Empress Josephine, wife of Napoleon. The high-waisted gown has been the inspiration for fashion trends down through the years, including evening gowns of this season.

Both Simplicity and Splendor Utilized by Sirens of History

Pageant Shows That Cleopatra Leaned Heavily on Glitter; Helen of Troy Went in for Line, Katie O'Shea for Ruffles.

EITHER simple or dazzling clothes will do the trick when it comes to ensnaring men. Which you wear should depend upon your type—and possibly the type of man to be snared.

This was the outstanding lesson in sartorial charm gleaned from a preview of the pageant "Women of Destiny," which is to be presented this afternoon and tomorrow at the Woodward & Lothrop store. In the pageant are shown reproductions of the attire worn by the most romantic and influential feminine personages in history.

The old battle of simplicity versus ornamentation is fought out in the clothes pageant. Lady Hamilton (the "incomparable Emma"), for instance, is presented in a simple gown of white over pink. On the other hand, the Marie Antoinette gown (in the shade of blue the unfortunate queen loved best), is the most elaborate in the collection, being made of 42 yards of moire taffeta, looped, puffed and distended. But, of course, Lady Hamilton was dealing with stuffed-shirt English lords, Marie Antoinette with decadent French nobles.

Cleopatra's Sorcery.

Cleopatra belonged to the dazzle school and the mythical Helen of Troy to the classical. The Serpent of the Nile is represented in a gown of cloth of gold with front panels and shoulders of bright blue satin elaborately embroidered in gold sequins. She has a scintillating headdress and several pounds of pearls wrapped around her throat. The fair Helen appears, not in white as she is popularly pictured, but in a gown of medium blue chiffon made in the classic Grecian manner, hand-pleated and the bodice adorned with gold braid in leaf design.

John Alden's Priscilla, as might be expected, is in a demure gray outfit, the kind that would make any man feel big and protective. Another elaborate gown is that of Elizabeth of Bavaria. It is pale pink with a low-shouldered decolletage and the voluminous skirt as well as the bodice almost completely covered with pink roses.

The pageant presents many other interesting characters. There is Eliza Jumel, first career woman in America who made a fortune in real estate and who later was the second wife of Aaron Burr. She wears a gown and cloak which at the time set other women to talking and which can be worn today as current style. The gown is multi-colored brocade and the cape is wool embroidered in gold braid and paillettes.

Katie Liked Ruffles.

There is also Katie O'Shea, the love of Parnell, who is of special interest now because of the play and motion picture dealing with her romance. Her gown is of gray silk with bustle back, the entire skirt being trimmed with lace ruffles. A velvet toque and muff complete the ensemble. Charlotte of Mexico, who didn't like red but wore it a great deal because her husband, Maximilian, was fond of the color, is presented in a red-and-black plaid taffeta. The Betsy Patterson gown is an original and the prize of the entire collection. It is gray net over pink silk, with a panel the entire length of the gown embroidered in paillettes and silk.

This outstanding array of costumes was created by Helen Virginia Meyer, fashion historian. She is as full of gossip about the "women of destiny" as she is of fashion and style information, and in telling of the history of the women included in the collection she exhorts the models "to be natural." With this persuasion, the girls eagerly slip out of streamlined coats and dresses into voluminous gowns and wigs and become modern Jenny Linds, Queens of Sheba and so on, with the greatest of ease. It is acclaimed one of the greatest collections of costumes ever to go on exhibition. The historic pageant will end with two simultaneous modern wedding parties—one designed for formal evening and the other for informal afternoon.

Peasant Trims.

Paris (U.P.).—Heim specializes in peasant trims of Balkan inspiration in his current collection, using braid, soutache and passementerie, and at Chanel a black velvet suit with straight-lined jacket is made with belted front and gold buttons in an inverted triangle of military inspiration. Piquet uses buttons in the same manner and gives accent to the shoulder line.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Distributed Weight Within 10 Per Cent of Normal Makes Symmetry.

By Ida Jean Kain.

Normal weight, however, varies with structure. The girl with a wide frame can weigh more than the girl of the same height with a slight frame. As a general rule, if you have a wide frame, with heavy bones, you should allow 110 pounds for 5 feet of height and five and one-half pounds for each additional inch. A variation of 10 per cent above or below this allowance is considered normal.

In determining symmetry, the pivotal measurements are chest, bust, waist and hips.

While the proportionate difference between the pivotal measurements varies only slightly in most figures, the short, stocky figure will not have as great a difference between chest and bust and between bust and waistline. Even with the short girl, however, the waistline should be seven inches less than the bust measurement.

The tiny girl with a small frame normally weighs much less than any other type. You may be tall or short, but if your frame is very slight the basic weight for 5 feet may be estimated at 100 pounds, with the same five and one-half-pound allowance for each inch by which the height exceeds 5 feet. A wisp of a girl may have a bust measurement that exceeds the chest by two and one-half inches to three inches and a very tiny waistline with nine to ten inches difference between the bust and the waist.

Normal weight for the average figure is based on 105 pounds for 5 feet of height, with a 5½-pound allowance for each extra inch. The proportionate difference in this ideal figure is as follows: The bust may exceed the chest by two and one-half inches; the waistline should be eight inches less than the bust, and the hips should not be more than three inches larger than the bust.

In the beautiful figure this proportionate difference exists between the measurements. But what happens to the average figure? The bust measurement loses its firm contour, the waist thickens and the hips broaden. When the measurements do not match, the figure is no longer lovely. It is not unusual to find only a four-inch difference between bust and waistline, and a hipline six to eight inches too large.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Food Preparation.

The house mother finds, when her children are beginning to go to school and have developed some tastes and likings of their own about food, that she has quite a problem on her hands.

"Mother, make the eggs good just as they are at nursery school," says 3-year-old, and that, with other similar requests, make extra work for mother. The result is that she soon is preparing two sets of meals three times a day. This is too much for her, so, in trying to save work, more of a certain food is cooked for the child than he can eat at one meal and the result is he has the same food for several days, and gets just as tired of this monotony as an adult. Another solution is to give the young child the same food the adult eats, only with all the flavoring, spices and pepper omitted.

The problem has been attacked in a practical way by the Merrill-Palmer Motherhood and Home Training School, in Detroit. They have just published a little pamphlet of advice with recipes and menus. I intend to abstract some of their experience in this column during the next few days, but I advise all mothers who are running their households alone during these days of decreasing income, to send for the book itself, because every one of its 67 pages is filled with useful and tested information and help.

A child's food needs are not so different from an adults. They need more vitamins and more substances in the diet for growth and development. But what the child eats is good for the adult, and it is easier for the adult to adapt himself to the child's diet than the other way about. So in a household where one set of meals must do for all, it is better to construct your meals around the child's meals rather than around the grownups.

The staple needs for a child are: Milk, eggs, a cooked green leafy or yellow vegetable, a raw leafy vegetable, fruit, especially citrus fruit or tomato, and whole cereal, either as whole cereal for breakfast or as whole wheat bread.

Of course that doesn't mean that the child can't eat other things. If it gets enough of the above, it can add some of the things it likes on the margin.

Varying your means to tastes, habits and incomes, the following skeleton menu shows the types of foods needed in a day's menu, which will supply the needs both of children and grownups:

Breakfast: Fruit, cooked cereal, whole wheat toast, milk.

Cardinal Red.

With cardinal red running the gamut in this season's color scheme, Virginia Walker, movie actress, has utilized that shade to trim her new town and country dress. The dress, of a novelty wool in the new "wheatena" gray shade, has cardinal red appliqued at the neck and hem in a jagged edge. A belt, bag, sandals and suede gauntlets carry out the red color scheme, while her jaunty felt hat is ornamented with a tall feather of that shade.

White Hats Return.

For midwinter wear, the inevitable white hat has again made its appearance. The 1937 creations are fashioned of dull white fabrics and are particularly effective when worn with all-black ensembles. They feature turbanized stylings, toques and pillboxes—sometimes accented with black veils.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

YOU AND I well remember—and heaven knows we are not Mrs. Methuselahs—when the Island of Bali was a tiny spot in the Dutch East Indies, hardly worthy of mention in the geography lesson.

A few years ago a movie man—the Count de Falaise de Coudraye, who is married to someone in Hollywood—took a whirring camera there and shot cinematically a lot of lovely girls who were wearing nothing above the belt. This film and its successors found much favor among the lower and more evil people, and then quietly died away. We thought that Bali, from an American point of view, was completely defunct—left alone in the sea to its natives and the camera-mad tourists from world-cruise ships.

How little we knew! Two Bali books have just appeared—a brilliant one by the artist Covarrubias and another by Vicki ("Grand Hotel") Baum. Not only that, the Balinese influence is running madly up and odwn Fifth avenue, wherever resort clothes are peddled—which is everywhere.

* * * *

One huge store, in particular, has just held a great showing of clothes designed by this same Miguel Covarrubias—not only for the hot sands, but also printed affairs for afternoon and evening wear. They are scanty, of course, but nothing like the clothing affected by the Balinese belles still willing to pose (for a fee). These, alas, begin at the equator, and proceed south. Nothing so horrible yet affects the womanhood of America, and though I once bet $5 with a manufacturer that such a day would come, I see my fiver slipping rapidly. For if Bali can't do it, what can?

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Our leading marital theater team—need I say they are Miss Lynn Fontanne and Mr. Alfred Lunt?—are plotting something between performances of their current success, "Amphitryon 38." It is nothing less than a series of special performances of "The Sea Gull," by that Russian master, Chekov. Ambition to try the classics always burns in the actor's heart, and since Ruth Gordon's labors in Ibsen's "Doll House" rate as one of the season's wonders, I see no reason why the Lunts shouldn't take a crack at Chekov—do you?

* * * *

I have just seen a widget that may do away with "the great American gesture," so hated by men—girdle-tugging. The thing I've seen not only keeps the stockings snugly and straightly in place, but also defies the girdle to "ride up." And if that is not an advance in civilization, kindly name one!

* * * *

My old friend, Ursula Parrott, the novelist, who was "Kitty" from Boston when we fought life together in her pre-book days, seems always involved in husband trouble. Her first was Lindsay Parrott, the newspaper man, and a good one. Her second was a gentleman named Charles T. Greenwood. Now I hear that she is shedding her third, an attorney named John J. Wildberg. Of course, Kitty makes pots of money from her novels, magazine serials and the movie rights. This, I suppose, must be some consolation—but it is not what a woman wants, as I'm sure I needn't tell you.

* * * *

I note a sudden rush of young Rockefellers to the South. The same ship took to Bermuda Mr. and Mrs. Laurance S. Rockefeller and Mr. and Mrs. David M. Milton, she being the only daughter of the current John, whose first name (the girl's, of course) is Abby. The waterfront sharks tell me the Queen of Bermuda rolled no more than usual, even with this colossal cargo.

Six Supreme Court Justices and Five Members of the Cabinet Head Line of 1,000 Guests at Reception for Judiciary

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

While the scarlet-coated Marine Band played some of its liveliest airs, Washington's only authentic "court society" gathered at the White House last night to pay its respects to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the annual reception for the judiciary.

Time was when this formal function came and went with a minimum of fanfare. But in recent years, when the spotlight of public attention has turned so often to the Supreme Court, the official reception at which its members mingle with representatives of the Capital's official and residential circles, as well as members of other courts, has become one of the most important events of the social season.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Six Justices of the Supreme Court, including Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, were in the line of 1,000 guests received by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Headed by the Chief Justice, the other five proceeded in order, with the exception of Justice Hugo Black, who arrived with Mrs. Black a few minutes late. In the place they normally would have had in the line were the Solicitor General and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the former of whom may be appointed to fill the vacancy in the Supreme Court. The Blacks came along after 22 guests had been received.

Later, in the State dining room, when Justice Black was asked what caused his delay in arriving, he flushed and begged the question with "Was I late?"

Mrs. Black, in a gown of white and silver lame, cut on simple line with a short train, carried off the palm for pulchritude and fashion. But Mrs. Hughes, regal in black velvet with wing-effects on the shoulder and a vest of gold and rose lame, ran a close second. Mrs. Roosevelt's gown of white brocade was one of the handsomest she has worn this season. Over her arm was a white fox neckpiece and around her neck was a diamond necklace.

While the company gathered in the brilliantly lighted East Room, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were greeting members of the Cabinet and their wives in the dining room. In keeping with the custom at large official receptions, the Chief Executive and the chatelaine of the White House led the official procession that filed out from the State dining room into the red-carpeted corridor and then to the Red Room, where the Cabinet circle remained while the President and Mrs. Roosevelt continued to the Blue Room. There, standing before a mass of ferns, they shook hands with their guests.

Five Cabinet Members Attend

In the Cabinet group waiting in the Red Room while the long line filed past the host and hostess were the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the latter gowned in blue and silver lame with a fitted bodice and a full skirt terminating in a train; the Secretary of War without Mrs. Woodring—illness prevented her being there; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, who had chosen a frock of ice-blue satin; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, the latter gowned in white satin; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, she in black satin with a gold lame bodice that matched her slipper and evening bag, and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, who wore a gray lame gown.

The Chief Justice, accompanied by Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, led the line that proceeded through the Green Room and to the Blue Room. From there the line moved on through the Red Room and into the State dining room, where refreshments were served at a table along the west side.

Justice Louis D. Brandeis and Mrs. Brandeis, who never go out in the evenings, and Justice Cordozo, who is ill, were very much missed in the distinguished company. Retired Justice Willis Van Devanter, who attended last year in company with his sister, Mrs. Sanford L. Raridan, was also absent. He was in New York yesterday on business.

Justice Hugo Black and Mrs. Black made their first White House appearance since the former ascended to the highest court.

Justice Black Center of Attraction

Both Justice Black, newest member of the court, and Justice George Sutherland, who has announced his retirement, were centers of attention. Political complexions and conservative or liberal leanings in the company virtually could be determined by the guests who flocked around Justice Black and those who gathered around Justice Sutherland during the evening.

Mrs. Sutherland, who has long followed the rule of never going to evening functions, did not break it for the last reception for the judiciary at which her husband will appear as a full-fledged justice.

Justice Pierce Butler was accompanied by Mrs. Butler, the latter wearing a frock of black silk cut on simple lines and terminating in a slight train.

Justice Harland Fiske Stone was accompanied by Mrs. Stone, who wore a handsome gown of green velvet, fashioned with a short train, trimmed with gold flowers and shirring across the front of the waist and worn with gold slippers. One of the most talented wives in the judiciary circle, Mrs. Stone was surrounded by friends who attended the recent display of her water-colors at the Corcoran Art Gallery.

With Justice Owen J. Roberts were his wife and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts. Mrs. Roberts wore a gown of silver lame and Miss Roberts had chosen a frock of pink lame with silver threads through it.

The judiciary committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives and the various United States and District of Columbia courts were represented at the reception.

Many Notables Among the Guests

Among the guests were Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst, the latter gowned in silver lame trimmed with exquisite jade clasps; Mrs. William E. Borah, who wore a lovely frock of chiffon shading from pale yellow to amber and fashioned with a fitted waist and a full skirt. With her was her niece, Miss Joan Luedderann, visiting here from the West. She wore white chiffon with a crimson sash.

The chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner were there; also Associate Justice Justin Miller and Mrs. Miller, in a gown of grey-blue crepe; Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran, the latter garbed in black satin; Judge Fay Bentley, of the District Juvenile Court, in a frock of black fringe styled on a crepe foundation with a high neck outlined with gardenias; Representative and Mrs. U. S. Guyer, the latter in a gown of gold lace fashioned on straight lines with a gold satin train hung from the shoulder, and Representative and Mrs. Sam C. Massingale, she in rose peta cut with a full skirt, a fitted bodice and small buttons down the front.

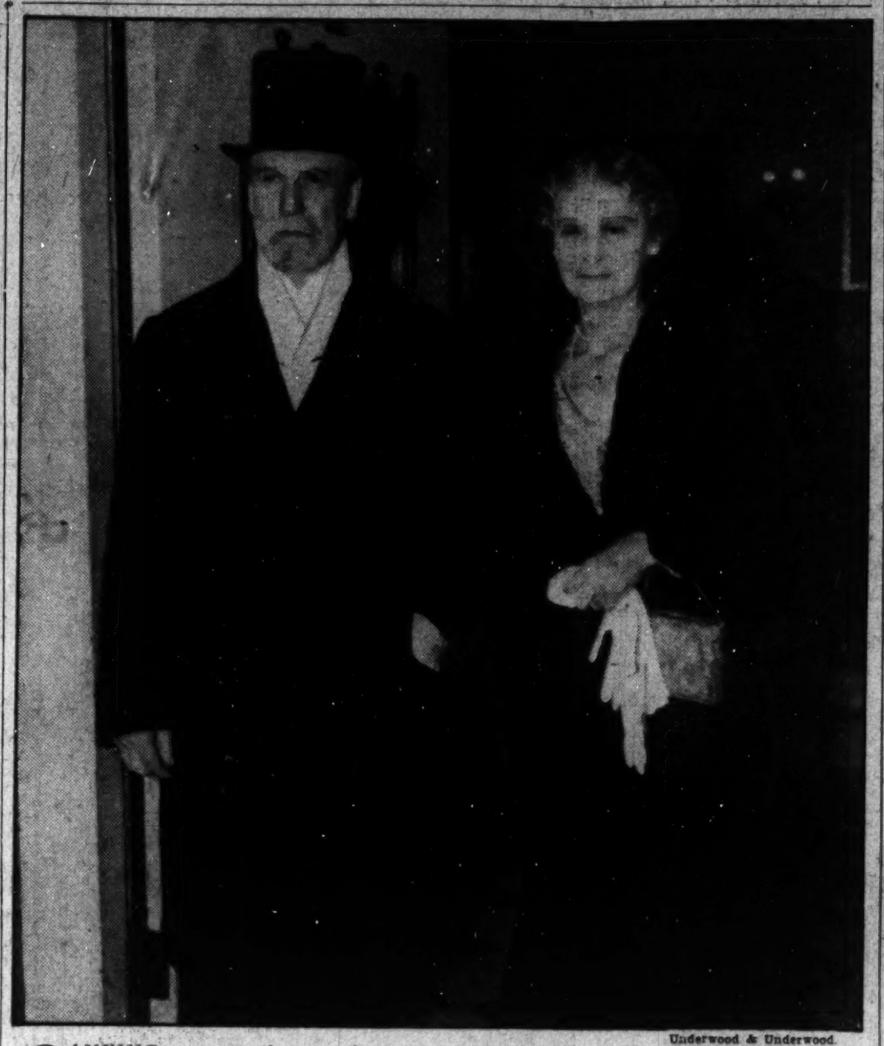
Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, was there; also, Associate Justice Peyton Gordon and Mrs. Gordon, Associate Justice Jesse Adkins and Mrs. Adkins, the latter in a frock of dark blue trimmed with blue sequins; Associate Justice Joseph W. Cox and Mrs. Cox, Associate Justice F. Dickinson Letts and Mrs. Letts, who were accompanied by their niece, Miss Dorothy Letts, and Justice Dickinson's sister, Mrs. Richard Hughes.

Judge Ernest H. Van Fossan, of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, and Mrs. Van Fossan were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Bulkley, of Detroit. Mrs. Van Fossan wore a green velvet period with a full skirt, and Mrs. Bulkley was in brown lace with gold accents and a brief train.

Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff of the Army, and Mrs. Craig were among the early arrivals. She wore a frock of gold brocade. Entering the front door of the White House about the same time were Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marines Corps, and Mrs. Holcomb, the latter in a blue crepe frock set off with a sequin jacket of the same shade.

Among others seen there were Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in a pink crepe gown studded with rhinestones; Judge and Mrs. Norton Goodwin, the latter in peach crepe; Miss Annabel Matthews, in a handsome frock of purple chiffon; Judge Eugene Black, of the Court of Appeals, and Mrs. Black and their three daughters, Miss Margaret Black, Miss Adele Black and Mrs. George E. Muth, the latter accompanied by Mr. Muth.

After moving down the reception line, guests assembled in the State dining room and gathered by dozens and scores at the long table, decorated with roses and carnations, where refreshments were served. Members of the Supreme Court for the most part remained in the State dining room or drifted into the Red Room and stayed there until they left. Other guests either remained in the dining room or walked on into the corridor, waiting there until the Navy orchestra struck up the music in the East Room, where dancing was the order of entertainment until the reception was over.



Underwood & Underwood.

Stokowski Missed, but Mme. Saito Leads Brilliant Diplomatic and Social Group Attending Concert.

A large and distinguished audience gathered last night at Constitution Hall to hear another in the series of concerts by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. While not quite as gala as last time, when Stokowski himself conducted, it was nevertheless a representative group which gathered to hear the program directed by Eugene Ormandy.

Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, occupied a box with several members of the embassy staff. She wore a black net gown and mink coat. Nearby Miss Mabel Boardman occupied her usual box, having as guests the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet and the Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, Anthony de Balsay.

Mrs. Tracy Dows looked very distinguished, her gown topped by a black taffeta wrap and a silver fox cape. Her son, Olin Dows, was also present.

Fur capes were enjoying great popularity last evening, vying with mink coats as the most favored wrap. Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who was accompanied by Mr. Shouse, wore a lovely fur three-quarter length model with a corsage of gardenias, and Miss Elizabeth Houghton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alanson Houghton topped her gold and blue dinner dress with a mink coat.

Plans Uncertain For Canadians

Weather May Move Luncheon of R. Walton Moore Up to Today.

Entertainment for members of the Canadian delegation here to attend meetings on aviation and radio depends a good deal on the weather. If skies are clear today they will be flown down to inspect Langley Field, Va.

The party will take off from Naval Air Station in two Navy transport planes, weather permitting. If skies look bad, they will wait until tomorrow.

R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department, will entertain at luncheon tomorrow for the delegation if they go to Langley Field today, but if the weather prevents flying, he will hold his luncheon today.

Members of the delegation are staying at the Carlton Hotel. On their trip to Langley Field they will be entertained by Brig. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, Commanding General at the field.

Delegation members include V. I. Smart, chairman; Lieut. Comdr. C. P. Edwards; J. A. Wilson, Wing Comdr. A. T. Cowley, H. S. Walsh, P. T. Coolican and L. C. Christie.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

"OH, IF THERE were only 3 square feet of ice somewhere in Washington!" bewailed Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister. She had called up to invite us to meet Sonja Henie tomorrow afternoon at 4:30, at the Legation.

The little skater, whose pictures have broken box office records, is on tour with the troupe which appeared with her in "Thin Ice." She will fly here from Cleveland tomorrow for the luncheon at which the Minister will present her with the Order of St. Olav, recently conferred on Sonja by the King.

EVEN ON AN afternoon as gloomy as yesterday, the 1925 F street club managed to maintain its reputation for cheeriness. There were a number of interesting people lunching there.

The dynamic Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, wearing a green suit with Persian lamb trimming and a black hat, was at a table with the retiring Minister of Rumania, Charles A. Davila, at her right. This bright star of Washington's social world expects to leave Washington the end of the month to take up the cause of the "people" in his homeland. Others in this group yesterday were Mrs. Truxtun Beale in her favorite black; Sir Willmott (London Times) Lewis and Lady Lewis and Frank Kent.

Mrs James F. Curtis herself entertained a few friends at luncheon, among them being Mrs. Sydney Cloman, Mrs. Ingalls Sard, Mrs. Louis Caldwell and Mrs. Walter Distler. At a table nearby were Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert (not in riding clothes, which is news) and Mrs. William MacCracken.

• • • •

AN INTERESTINGLY diverse cross-section of Washington gathered at the home of the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre yesterday for the tea at which they entertained between 5 and 7. There were diplomats, State Department officials, just plain residents, and John L. Lewis.

The Sayre home, which is in Spring Valley, faces a wooded hill, which yesterday was covered with snow. Inside fires were blazing away in the drawing room, with its light-colored walls and French furniture, and upstairs in the room which Mrs. Sayre had originally intended as a studio, but which is now a combined library and music room.

Receiving with the hosts was Mr. Sayre's daughter, Miss Eleanor Sayre, who left later last evening to return to her studies at Bryn Mawr. Maj. and Mrs. Vernon Evans, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Sayre, were other members of the family present.

Many people there yesterday had either just returned from out of town or are on the point of departure from Washington. Mr. Lewis recently returned from a trip to Arizona. The Financial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Noel Trentham, also among the guests, are off next Tuesday by motor to Florida for a stay of several weeks.

Mrs. George Messersmith, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Louis Mustard, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., who is visiting her until Saturday. Others present were the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, Mrs. Benjamin King, who was among those pouring tea; Mrs. Harold Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Williams, the former, who is with the National Geographic, has just returned from a trip to Bali; Mrs. C. Powell Minnigerode, Mrs. John Carter Vincent, Mrs. Harry McBryde, George Williams and Mrs. Chester Flather.

Mme. Curie Is Honored By Women

Biography of Scientist Given Official of French Embassy.

Mrs. Roosevelt Speaks at Cancer Control Army's Ceremony.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Another link in the friendship between the United States and France was welded yesterday when the Women's Field Army for the Control of Cancer, representing a membership of 1,000 women, paid tribute to Mme. Marie Curie, "a great scientist and a great woman," presenting a specially-bound edition of her biography to Jules Henry, Charge d'Affaires.

Mrs. Roosevelt was the guest of honor at the ceremony, held at the French Embassy with Mrs. Carl Illig, of Massachusetts, national commander of the Women's Field Army presiding. Mrs. Illig also is chairman of public health for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, whose president, Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, and her executive committee formed the delegation which attended the ceremonies.

In paying tribute to Mme Curie, Mrs. Roosevelt spoke of her great work and what it meant to the world and to the women of all countries, to whom her achievement was a lasting inspiration. The United States owes another debt of gratitude to France for her and her work, she said.

Other Women Leaders Speak

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Lawson and Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, were other speakers. Miss Lenroot described the conditions under which Mme. Curie worked, and told how American women raised money for radium, which the great scientist would not accept for herself but for womankind. Miss Lenroot quoted from the biography, as did Mrs. Illig.

"Today Mme. Curie is a magnificent inspiration to those of us in America who seek through the Women's Field Army to reduce the mortality rate from cancer," Mrs. Illig said.

"Our women, under the direction of distinguished physicians, are active today in 44 States and know that the patience, the courage and the determination that were Mme. Curie's must be theirs also if they are to triumph to save human life."

M. Henry, in accepting the gift, expressed his appreciation of Mrs. Roosevelt's participation in the presentation, and declared that wherever there was a movement for the good of the people, she would be found in the front ranks.

The biography of Mme. Curie, by her daughter, Mme. Joliot-Curie, was authographed and bound by hand in leather for the Women's Field Army by Gasten Pulen, French binder.

Many Sections Are Represented

Members of the federation's executive committee who attended the ceremony were Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, of Portland, Oreg., first vice president; Mrs. Charles Seymour, of Chicago, second vice president; Mrs. John Speed Harvey, of Huntington, W. Va., secretary; Mrs. LaFell Dickinson, of Keene, N. H., treasurer; Mrs. J. Blair Buck, of Richmond, Va., budget chairman; Mrs. James Carlark, of Rhode Island, chairman of industry in the public welfare department; Mrs. Harry Smith, of New Hampshire, vice chairman of American citizenship; Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Georgia, a director; Mrs. W. M. Vandivort, of Oklahoma.

Also Mrs. David Long, of Kansas City, chairman of arrangements for the triennial convention there in May; Mrs. E. H. Heller, of Kentucky, who is in charge of the cancer control campaign in her State and is to receive a medal in recognition of her work; Mrs. E. W. Shirk, of Redlands, Calif., chairman of juniors for the federation; Mrs. J. L. Gibson, of Utah, member of the executive committee; Mrs. E. Lee Ozbirn, treasurer of the Oklahoma State Federation, and Mrs. Edward Knight Dexter, of San Francisco, chairman of the foundation fund.

The executive committee devoted the rest of the day to its business meeting at the General Federation headquarters, 1734 N street, and also held a session last night.

Today will be given over to social affairs preceding the board meetings tomorrow morning. A forum luncheon has been arranged at the National Press Club this noon, at which Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, will speak, and Dr. Carl C. Taylor, of the department, will discuss "The Producer." Mrs. Edwin Bevens, of Helena, Ark., chairman of rural and urban co-operation, is in charge. There also will be a luncheon for Group 4, at which Mrs. Felix McWhirter, of Indianapolis, will entertain at the Iron Gate Inn.

This afternoon, Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the club women at the White House, and tonight the annual reception will be given at Central Federation headquarters, with members of Congress and others from official circles as guests.

Engagement Told.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Johnson, of Silver Spring, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Adele Boyer Johnson to Herbert Carvel Diamond, also of Silver Spring.

As yet no date has been set for the wedding.

First Lady Attends Book Presentation and Luncheon

THE Senate Ladies' Luncheon Club was entertained at its opening meeting yesterday by Mrs. John Nance Garner, the president, at a luncheon at the Washington Hotel. In the upper picture are Mrs. Roosevelt, center, who was guest of honor, with Mrs. Garner at the right, and Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of Justice Black, one of the members. The First Lady went to the luncheon directly from the French Embassy, where she attended the presentation of the biography of Madame Curie to Jules Henry, Charge d'Affaires, by Mrs. Carl Illig, commander of the Women's Field Army for the control of cancer. In the lower picture are shown Mrs. Illig, left, Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and Mr. Henry with the specially bound volume, which was presented.

Miss Kinsella Talks to League

Prison Work Discussed by Justice Department Executive.

Miss Nina Kinsella, of the Bureau of Prisons, Department of Justice, yesterday afternoon addressed the department of Government and the legal status of women, of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters at its meeting in the District Building, discussing conditions in penal institutions for women. The department of which Mrs. Pearl B. Klein is chairman, is making this part of its year's study.

Miss Kinsella, who is also president of the Washington Business and Professional Women's Club, described the various types of institutions for women throughout the country as well as those in the District, in which the group is especially interested.

She told of the Industrial Reformatory at Alderson, W. Va., which is the one large Federal institution for women and has practically an ideal setup, she said. The prisoners are examined when they enter by a committee, including the superintendent, deputy superintendent, chief medical officer, psychiatrist, psychologist, supervisor of education, chaplain, supervisor of industries and the parole officer. The case is considered from the standpoint of custody and discipline, social service, treatment and training, and the possibility of transfer to another institution should it be deemed advisable.

A suitable program should be worked out in every institution, said Miss Kinsella, to improve the inmate so that when she is released she will be able to make the adjustment and become a useful and respected citizen of the community instead of a greater liability to society than before she was committed. Trained personnel in prison administration under the merit system is essential as are adequate space for segregation, impartial treatment and discipline and sanitary facilities.

The largest per cent of offenders in the reformatory are women between the ages of 30 and 34, and violation of the narcotic and liquor laws lead in the offenses of which they have been convicted.

Miss Kinsella goes to Philadelphia next week to address the 151st convention of the Pennsylvania Prison Society, January 18.

Traffic Hazards And Remedies Are Discussed

Executive of Congress Urges Uniform Laws in States.

The dumb city driver is as much a menace to safety on country roads as is the rube from the country on city streets, Dr. William McKinley Robinson, of Kalamazoo, Mich., rural service chairman of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, told the advisory committee on traffic safety at its meeting yesterday in the Washington Hotel. Safety education in rural areas should be emphasized in the Parent-Teacher program this year, he asserted.

Statistics show, according to Dr. Robinson, that city drivers, accustomed to being directed by lights or traffic officers, fail to drive with care on country roads and are slow in making up their minds when they meet a situation demanding prompt decision.

He also urged support of the campaign for uniform traffic laws, pointing out that there are still nine States in which no driver's license is required.

The teen-age driver came in for consideration by the committee. The fact that boys and girls between the ages of 14 and 20 are involved in the largest number of accidents, indicates there should be driving instruction in the high schools, it was decided. The problem of preparing teachers to give such instruction was one angle considered and another was who would supply the automobiles for the students to use.

Miss Marian L. Telford, of New York, chairman of Safety for the Parent-Teacher Congress and of education for the National Safety Council, conducted the meeting and Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, president of the National Congress, was among those leading the discussions. Mrs. William A. Hastings, national vice president, flew from Madison, Wis., to be present. Among others there were Mrs. L. W. Hughes, of Arlington, Tenn., president of the State Congress of Parents and Teachers, Dr. Ben Barrow, of Buffalo, national radio chairman, and Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman, of this city, legislative chairman.

The executive committee of the national congress will convene this morning at 10 and will adjourn this afternoon for the broadcast over N. B. C. at 4:30 o'clock under the auspices of the organization. Dr. Thomas Gosling, Dr. Mitchell Dreese, of George Washington; Mrs. Pettengill and Dr. Anderson, pastor of the First Congregational Church, will be on the program devoted to citizenship.

Mrs. John Nance Garner, president of the Senate Ladies' Luncheon Club, yesterday entertained members at their first luncheon of the Congressional season at the Washington Hotel. About 100 were present with Mrs. Roosevelt, the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, and the Cabinet wives as guests of honor.

The luncheon was given in the roof dining room, where a long buffet table was set. The guests were served there and then chose their places at small tables, gathering in informal groups.

Seated with Mrs. Roosevelt were Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Senator Hattie Caraway Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark and Mrs. Morris Sheppard.

Among others present were Mrs. William H. Gillette and Mrs. Daniel Hastings, who retain their membership in the club and who were both celebrating birthdays yesterday. Senator Caraway is a member by virtue of having been the wife of a Senator rather than because of her present place in the Senate. The luncheon club now will resume its weekly meetings in the Capitol.

Wreck Victim Blamed for 2 Auto Fatalities

Driver of Car Hit by Aged Speeder on Christmas Eve Is Cleared.

Charles Snyder, 75, of Smithfield, Va., yesterday was held responsible for his own death and that of his wife by a coroner's jury investigating the automobile accident which claimed the lives of the aged couple.

A second verdict by the jury declared accidental the traffic fatality of Miss Mary Clement, 59, 223 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, who died in Providence Hospital Sunday.

Meanwhile, Charles Rawlings, 47, 512 K street southeast, became the fourth District traffic victim when an autopsy disclosed he died of injuries sustained at Sixth street and Virginia avenue southeast on Christmas Eve.

Other Driver Absolved.

The Snyder verdict automatically absolved Harry J. Hayner, 25, 707 Rock Creek Church road northwest, driver of the car with which Snyder collided on Mount Vernon Boulevard on Christmas Eve.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson testified that Snyder's car was traveling at high speed and that Snyder, before he died, said he was attempting to repair the windshield wiper.

Haynes, Tolson stated, saw the speeding car and pulled off the road into a parking zone. Snyder's machine leaped the gutter and crashed into the halted Haynes' car.

Mrs. Snyder was killed almost instantly. Snyder died Monday in Emergency Hospital.

Haynes' mother, Mrs. Nettie Haynes, 59, still was in critical condition at Emergency Hospital last night of injuries received in the accident.

George H. Hughes, 21, 622 Morton place northeast, was exonerated at the inquest into death of Miss Clement. It was testified the woman walked into the path of his automobile at Thirteenth and D streets northeast Saturday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald declared the death of Rawlings due to traffic when an autopsy disclosed he died of fractured ribs and a broken leg.

Two men who gave their names as Arthur G. Boan, 31, 4002 D street southeast, and Willie F. Elrod, 38, 3801 Halley terrace southeast, were held for the coroner in the Rawlings case.

Two Pedestrians Hurt.

Two persons were sent to hospitals last night with possible skull fractures and brain concussions as the result of traffic accidents.

John Randolph Morris, 55, 109 First street northeast, was taken to Providence Hospital and later transferred to Gallinger after being struck by a street car at Second and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Sixteen-year-old Frances Adams, colored, 716 P street northwest, was struck at Sixth and R streets northwest by an auto police said was driven by Ryland A. Hale, 613 G street northeast. Condition of both was said to be serious.

the slogan "Thou Shalt Not Kill."

"We have got to get across the point," Schulte told the meeting, "that this drive is going to be continuous and intensive. Police are going to become tough and hard-boiled. Every violator is going to be brought in and at least looked over."

To this phase of the program, Maj. Brown and members of his command pledged support of every enforcement officer.

Purpose to Instill Fear.

To facilitate broadcasting of fatal accidents, police will verify promptly all details and submit reports to the various newspapers. In turn, the reports will be sent to radio stations.

The effect of this type of program, it was agreed last night, will be to instill the fear of traffic tragedies in the minds of citizens and let the public know that "something is going on in the District to stop sudden death."

Among other safety measures proposed last night was a move to regulate and protect pedestrian traffic at dangerous downtown intersections.

A system of amber lights was suggested, on which motor vehicles must remain at a standstill and give pedestrians the right-of-way.

Schulte indicated also he would press agitation for special regulations banning right and left turns at certain points and elimination of parking in sections of the congested area.

Truck Owners Next.

It was further proposed to inspect the records of all taxi drivers, resorting to permit suspension after an individual taximan has figured in five accidents. Plans were announced to award safe taxi drivers honor stickers for their windshields and unsafe ones with stickers of demerit.

Next Monday, Schulte said, he will confer with owners of various trucking fleets. A total of 65 fleet operators have been summoned to appear at this meeting.

Conferences with taxi owners and drivers, Police Court judges and the general driving public will follow, Schulte said.

Also attending last night's meeting were Representatives Short, of Missouri; Shafer, of Michigan, and Quinn, of Pennsylvania; Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer; M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic; C. Melvin Sharpe, chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council; Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, Inspector William E. Holmes, Jess Willard, of the Columbia Broadcasting System; William McAndrews, of the National Broadcasting Co.; Madeline Ensign, of WOL, and Julian Brylawki, of the Motion Picture Theater Owners' Association.

Allie S. Freed, one of the Nation's foremost industrialists and philanthropists, died late yesterday at Emergency Hospital, where he had been for the past two weeks with pneumonia. He was 46 years old and lived at the Shoreham Hotel.

A native of Nashville, Tenn., Mr. Freed was chairman of the Committee for Economic and Social Progress, which was composed of leaders in the field of American industry. This committee was formed about three years ago as the Committee for Economic Recovery. It made many studies and reports which were transmitted to President Roosevelt.

At the time of his death, Mr. Freed was head of the Buckingham Community model housing development, in Arlington County, a $10,000,000, 100-acre model housing community. The project, almost completed at the time of Mr. Freed's death, was hailed by housing authorities throughout the United States as an example of large-scale planning and housing financed by insurance holdings.

Before he came to Washington, Mr. Freed was president of the Paramount Motors Corporation, of New York, engaged in the construction of motor cars and taxi cabs. He recenlty had become interested in the Arthurdale Community, at Reedsville, W. Va.

He was a member of the Metropolis Club, of New York, and Phi Epsilon Pi. In Manhattan he was prominent in social and welfare work, and was a member of Temple Emmanuel and the Free Synagogue.

Surviving Mr. Freed are his wife, Mrs. Francis W. Freed; a son, Gerald Freed, and a daughter, Miss Joan Freed. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday. He also leaves his mother, Mrs. Sadie Tepper, of New York.

EAGLE
NATIONAL'S EAGLE BLENDED WHISKEY
ONE QUART

POUR a drink of National's EAGLE for any man who knew the fine whiskies of a generation ago and the first thing he'll say is . . . "Why that tastes like those pre-war American blends."

You see, those great American blends are rooted deeply in men's memories. And when a man who was around in the old days, takes his first drink of National's EAGLE . . . and samples that rich character, that smooth individuality, and above all, that exquisite mildness . . . his mind jumps back a generation to those never-to-be-forgotten American blends.

And that is exactly what National Distillers now offers you in National's EAGLE . . . the characteristic American difference in taste . . . the smo-o-o-oth mildness of those fine pre-war American blends.

National's EAGLE is one of the first such blends since pre-war days. For it took aged whiskies to make those fine, pre-war American blends! . . . and not until the Summer of 1937 have some of the fine American whiskies we wanted to use in this great blend become old enough to make the truly American pre-war type of blends.

• • •

ORDER a drink of National's EAGLE at the bar or restaurant. Or take a bottle home from your liquor store and make the acquaintance of a great American blend! It's a great whiskey . . . . American to the last drop . . . every drop of whiskey and every drop of grain neutral spirits in this blend has been distilled here in the United States in our own distilleries.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

There has been so much mollifying and conciliating the last few days—prominently by the President, who swung the White House door wide open to nervous business men; by Bob Jackson, who talked co-operation instead of monopoly; and by Senator O'Mahoney, who fanfared "most business men" as square shooters that the first week in January may go down in history as the Roosevelt Era of Good Will.

Perhaps the best recent illustration of how diplomacy works in Washington was illustrated by Ann Corio, the winsome strip-teaser, who was tantalizing the statesmen at a Washington theater . . . On successive evenings she was dated up with Italian, Hungarian and Albanian diplomats. A diplomat will go any length to serve his homeland.

The only man who smokes at the White House press conference is President Roosevelt, and that's fortunate, because a hundred cigarettes in that sanctum would fill it with a blue haze . . . I'm told the President is a "chain" smoker, but one cigarette usually sees him through a 15-minute bout of questions and answers.

It's a sacred state right to send anyone it wishes to the U. S. Senate, but some States are forgetful that its Senators are its ambassadors to the entire Republic . . . Some of the States (I might name one, for example) might be as well represented by a pair of Hindu maharajahs as by the men they sometimes have sent to the most august deliberative body.

Democracy is safe for another year, now that 1,000 Democrats munched "croute au chaud farci" and "breast of capon farci Perigourdine" at the $100 dinner . . . Dixie's gallant knight in the filibuster against the anti-lynching bill lambasts with the most scathing satire, raillery and sarcasm now audible in the Senate. . . . But he is reluctant to risk a reputation as a flippant wisecracker, which he definitely is not . . . In the warmth of debate his wit is droll and devastating, and probably more effective than tons of statistics or volumes of logic . . . As a practical Senator he understands why most of his colleagues are on the spot and must vote for the anti-lynching bill because they couldn't explain a vote against it to indignant Negroes and idealistic whites . . . As a humorous radio commentator he probably could rival Jack Benny and Eddie Cantor in national popularity, and do a lot to dispel the somber fog that hangs over Washington's glittering scene.

Senator McAdoo's young bride was there, too, and caught a glimpse of her husband's former stepmother-in-law, and of the Blue Room where the Senator married a Wilson daughter . . .

Washington is guessing that, if Walter Lippmann spends a couple of months here this winter he may swing back a little closer to the New Deal . . .

"—models to edify the Court."

There was quite a schism at a White House dinner about whether or not to eat the raw carrot garniture of the fish course . . . Guests at one end of the table ate theirs, with some trepidation; at the other end the carrots were treated as pure adornment . . . Later a few of the guests argued about it . . . It's up to the Division of Protocol to say the last word.

Civil Service Inquiry Poll To Be Taken

Ellender Reports on Several Hundred Complaints.

The Senate Civil Service Committee will be polled this week by Chairman Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota, on whether it favors a Senate investigation of the administration of the civil service laws as proposed in the Ellender resolution.

Senator Bulow announced the poll yesterday after only one other Senator besides himself—Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, had appeared for a meeting of the committee. Both Bulow and Logan affirmed their support of the inquiry.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, submitted a preliminary report on his analysis of several hundred complaints he has received from Federal employes since he introduced his resolution during the special session.

Favoritism Charged.

The resolution calls for an investigation by a selected committee of three Senators into charges that favoritism based largely on pretty faces, frequently is practiced in the appointments and promotions of Government workers.

Three major classifications of complaints were cited by Senator Ellender in his report, and five supplementary practices were cited as needing study.

The first three covered the methods used by bureau chiefs in giving efficiency ratings, in awarding promotions and in administering reprimands, demotions or transfers.

Other Complaint Bases.

Other bases of complaints listed were:

Methods of appointments, blanketing of employes into the civil service, transferring personnel from one bureau to good jobs in another over the heads of incumbents, too much authority for bureau chiefs, the practice of raising the salaries of bureau chiefs and their assistants while other employes are denied raises due to "lack of funds."

"Practically all complaints state that promotions are based on not what one knows but who one knows'," Senator Ellender said in his analysis.

"Merit Plays Little Part."

"It appears that merit plays little part in promotions. Bureau chiefs build up their favorites by giving them high efficiency ratings or assigning them work that will lead to promotion by reclassification, and holding down those they have no personal interest in, or against whom there is some grievance, by giving them low efficiency ratings or by never giving them an opportunity to do a higher class of work."

Ellender charged that employes who complained of unfair penalties imposed by their superiors were usually blacklisted "and never stand a chance of promotion in the Government service."

Some Government employes have complained, Ellender said, that "superiors regularly call on their assistants for loans or personal favors, which of course have to be granted if the worker wishes to retain his chance for promotion."

Health Test Case Set for Today in Tuberculosis War

A test of the Health Department's authority to use the courts in its drive on tuberculosis will be made in Police Court today with a 73-year-old father as the subject.

A statute passed in 1912, and subsequently overlooked, is the basis on which the man will be taken before Judge Walter J. Casey on a warrant charging failure to take precautions against the spread of the disease.

The man, according to health authorities, suffers from tuberculosis. He is accused of using the same table service as his 30-year-old wife and four children, whose ages range from 8 months to 9 years, and with failing to take other precautionary measures.

Health authorities say his ailment—moderately advanced pulmonary tuberculosis—came to their attention about a year ago. The man, they say, was urged to seek medical attention, and when he refused, attempts were made to compel him to submit to treatment.

Environment Held Greatest Crime Cause

Psychiatrist Holds Mental Conflicts Secondary, Urges News Control.

Crime is more often due to environmental influence than to mental conflicts which belong in the realm of pure psychiatry, Dr. Frederic Wertham, psychiatrist, of Bellevue Hospital, declared last night at the clinic being conducted at the Wardman Park Theater by the Institute of Criminal Science.

"I am an optimist and I do not think there are so many people who would commit crimes if there were not so many circumstances that lead to crime," he said.

Especially, Dr. Wertham asserted, does this opinion apply to the sex crimes which are "now being played up by the newspapers."

Asks "Understanding" on News.

Taking the stand that crime news leads to more crime, Dr. Wertham suggested "an understanding between psychiatrists and newspapers as to certain types of news that should not appear in popular print."

"I believe that such an understanding could be reached as the result of a conference, and that later the printing of certain types of news could be prevented by simple laws which would be acceptable to all constructive thinking persons," he said.

As another "preventive," Dr. Wertham called for simple and normal surroundings for growing children.

"The vast majority of children," he declared, "will grow up normally if the social environment is correct. I do not believe that psychiatric methods should be tried out on children. The child's mind should not be delved into."

Lists "In-Betweens."

One of the most difficult problems facing psychiatrists attempting to work with the courts, Dr. Wertham said, is the usual insistence that the doctor say point blank whether the person in question is sane or insane, dangerous or not dangerous.

In the in-between class Dr. Wertham declared he would place both sex crimes and the crimes due to alcoholism.

"I do not believe the sex criminal belongs entirely with the psychiatrists nor entirely with the penologists. He cannot be treated either as a patient or as a criminal."

Dr. Wertham urged treatment for all alcoholics, whether "dangerous" or not.

Leading the discussion panel which closed the clinic were: Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital; Dr. John Lind, of the criminal department of St. Elizabeths Hospital, and Dr. Ernest E. Hadley, trustee of the William Alanson White Psychiatric Foundation.

Many Toys, Candy Lead to Arrest of 3 Boys as Thieves

Their appetites and a superlative ability to satisfy them led three Washington boys into toils of the law yesterday.

Three boys, each 13 years old, revealed to detectives an amazing record of at least 12 housebreakings in the last month, resulting in loot in cash and property valued above $600.

Their tactics were simple. Between 7:30 and 8:30 p. m. they would ring doorbells of darkened houses and usually find the occupants away; if someone came to the door they would flee. Then, over porches or through opened windows, they would enter and loot at leisure.

Attention was called to them first when grocers and confectioners reported to police that the three were forever gorging themselves on candy, cakes and ice cream and seemed to have an endless variety of skates, toys and new clothing.

Arrests were made by Detective Sergt. Thomas Nally, of headquarters, and Precinct Detective Jeremiah Broderick.

Sarazan Is Advanced By Department Store

Appointment of Bert Sarazan, publicity director of the Hecht Co., to the new position of sales promotion manager, was announced yesterday by C. B. Dulcan, vice president and general manager of the company. Sarazan will continue as publicity director.

At the same time it was announced that James Rotto, formerly with another Washington store and prior to that with the Hecht Co., has rejoined the company as advertising manager.

2 Fugitives and Girl Captured by F.B.I. Men

Alva Dewey Hunt and his brother-inlaw, Hugh Gant, two of the country's ten most sought fugitives, were arrested in Houston, Tex., the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced last night.

The pair, wanted in connection with a series of bank robberies in Florida and Alabama, were armed, but did not resist. With them was Alene Bledsoe, 20-year-old girl companion of Hunt.

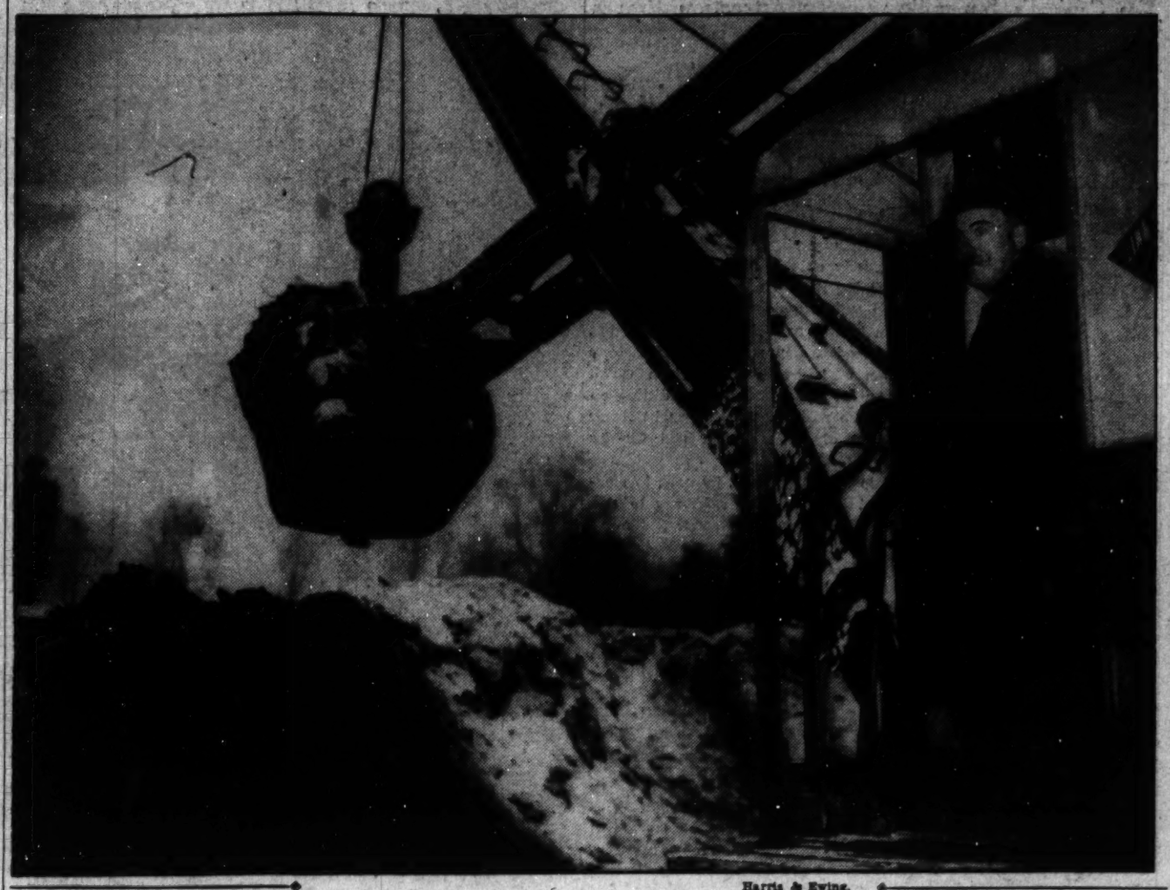
Ground Broken for New Home of National Institute of Health



Harris & Ewing.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran, United States Public Health Service, starts the work on three new buildings for the National Institute of Health, research unit of the Public Health Service, on the Rockville Pike at Bethesda.

45-Acre Bethesda Tract, Future Site of Buildings and National Cancer Institute, Donated by Late Luke J. Wilson.

With Surgeon General Thomas Parran turning the first spadeful of earth, ground was broken yesterday for the new home of the National Institute of Health and the National Cancer Institute at Bethesda, Md.

Participating in the ceremony, besides Dr. Parran, were Mrs. Luke J. Wilson, whose late husband donated the 4-acre site; L. W. Wilson, son of the donor, and Dr. L. R. Thompson, director of the National Institute of Health, research unit of the United States Public Health Service, now located west of Naval Hospital.

The industrial hygiene, administration and public health methods buildings already are under contract. Structures housing the National Cancer Institute, a unit of the Public Health Service, will be erected later on the 10-acre reservation adjoining the Wilson grant.

Record Lineup Crowd Picks 7 As Holdup Men

More than 250 victims of recent holdups in Washington last night picked from a line-up of 44 suspects at police headquarters seven colored men whom, according to police, they positively identified as bandits who robbed them. Several suspects, police said, were partially identified.

Two of those identified last night already had confessed, police said, to being in a trio which kidnaped three men at different times from Washington streets. They were returned Monday night from Avondale, Pa., one wearing a pair of trousers taken from the Rev. Ralph Bacon McMakin, of Avon, N. C.

The three, ranging from 15 to 19 years of age, were arrested in Pennsylvania Monday for speeding. They were driving a car belonging to A. E. Tomkin, 1700 block Lanier place northwest, who was tied to a tree near Lanham, Md., Saturday after his money, watch and car were taken.

North Carolina Cleric Kidnaped.

Police said the three colored youths also confessed holding up the Rev. Mr. McMakin at Union Station, January 5, robbing him of his money and clothing, and leaving him stranded on Bladensburg road.

The third holdup police said they confessed was that of Henry Graff, of Toledo, Ohio, who was tied to a tree near Silver Hill, Md., December 29, and $7 and his clothing taken.

One of the trio was identified at the line-up by Mis Rosett Helmidge, 2816 Thirteenth street northwest, as the one who snatched her pocketbook containing $18, January 6. He also was identified as one of two men who robbed his till of $25 the night of December 23. The grocer identified another of the gang as the second bandit.

Record Attendance.

Clarence Duckett, colored, 22, was identified by James Marshall, cab driver, as the man who took his cash and cab in a holdup the night of December 16. James Simms, colored, 24, of 224 Fourth street southwest, was identified as the bandit who held up William Kennedy, 921 East Capitol street, Christmas Eve and robbed him of $32.

Another cab driver, Edward A. Mitchell, 2541 Thirteenth street northwest, identified Leroy Armstead, colored, 22, as the holdup man who got his cash and cab December 14. Samuel C. White, colored, 23, of 1721 First street northwest, was identified by Miss Ruth Wilson, 1205 Fifteenth street, as the man who snatched her pocketbook containing $22 the night of November 12.

Lieut. John Fowler, who conducted the line-up, said it was the most largely attended in his experience. He commended those who had taken the trouble to attend and said a continuance of the same spirit would do much to break up crime in the District.

Crime Laid to Home Breakdown By Speaker at Housing Parley

The ever-increasing army of criminals in America is produced from sections of the Nation where conditions have broken down home life and atmosphere, Don A. Loftus, of Cleveland, told the Home and Community Builders conference, in session at the Washington Hotel yesterday.

"Today the leaders of our national life are fully awake and alive to the value of the moral influence of home ownership under our national life," he asserted.

"Fundamentally," he said, "the purchase of a home should mean to the owner the possession of something which will give him increasing happiness.

"The home builder of tomorrow must be able to assure himself of this in the purchase of a home. Furthermore, the price of the house must not be based on what it costs to build, necessarily; it must be based on what the house is worth and the home builder must be able to produce houses at a price most buyers can afford to pay."

The building and loan business has come through the depression in "splendid manner," Henry S. Rosenthal, international secretary of the group, said.

Other speakers included Louis J. Albers, international secretary of the National Housing Committee, and Horace Russell, general counsel of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Over 1,000 Attend D. C. Retreat Rally

The second annual Washington Retreat League rally at the Mayflower Hotel last night was attended by more than 1,000 members of the league and their friends.

Bishop John M. McNamara addressed members of the league in the absence of the guest speaker, the Rev. Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, who was unable to be present because of illness. The meeting was also addressed by the Rev. John S. Spence, director of the laymen's retreats in the District.

Mrs. Lynch Younger served as general chairman of the rally and musical entertainment was provided by the musical societies of Trinity College and Carola Rossie's orchestra. The glee club, under the direction of Marie Diamond, also participated.

D. C. Utility Joins In Fair Exhibition

The Washington Gas Light Co. announced yesterday it had subscribed to the gas industry's exhibit which will be one of the features of the New York World's Fair in 1939. The contribution of the gas industry to modern life will be portrayed in the exhibit on which construction will be begun this month.

The main entrance of the exhibit will lead into a wide circular "Court of Flame," in which a large jet of gas will be kept burning like a torch. Four 90-foot pylons, suggestive of the grid points above the burner of a gas range, will rise high above the building and aid in forming the inclosure for the court. The latest and most efficient types of appliances for cooking, refrigeration, space and water heating and air-conditioning will be displayed.

NolanDemands Beard Removal From Lorton

Justice Leader Will Ask Huff to Reconsider Gambler's Transfer.

"Beard must leave Lorton!"

Dr. James A. Nolan, executive director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, issued this ultimatum last night in announcing he would ask Ray L. Huff, superintendent of District penal institutions, to reconsider the transfer of Sam Beard, deposed king of the Capital's gambling rackets, from Atlanta Penitentiary to Lorton Reformatory. Nolan said he would make the request in a letter to Huff today.

"It is up to us and the District Attorney to see that Beard doesn't stay near the District," Nolan declared. "He has a six-year sentence to serve and he must serve every bit of it."

Linked With Suicide.

At the same time, Dr. Nolan suggested that Beard's transfer to Lorton might have had as much to do with the suicide Saturday of Carroll Peyton ("Nubby") Nuckols, pretender to Beard's vacated throne, as the treatment of harassment Nuckols was given by the Washington police.

"Isn't it quite a coincidence," he said, "the Nuckols should have committed suicide—if he did commit suicide—on the same day that Beard arrived at Lorton?"

Meanwhile, it was learned that the first the District Attorney's office knew of Beard's transfer was when it was announced in the newspapers, although Beard's incarceration away from the District had been requested verbally by the prosecutor.

Contacts Possible.

Despite Lorton's strict rules governing visitors, it is no secret that Beard, although behind bars, will be able to re-establish his old contacts.

Beard's transfer apparently was made in a routine way by the classification board at Atlanta, where he had been a good prisoner. Dr. Nolan said members of the association "feel that Beard's transfer was improvident, though Huff probably never would have approved it had he been familiar with the local situation."

House Group Still Debating D.C. Taxation

Committee Adjourns Until Monday With Revenue Issue Unsettled.

By James D. Secrest.

The question of whether an income tax or a $1.75 realty rate, or both, will be incorporated in a District tax bill was left unanswered yesterday as the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs recessed until Monday.

Members appeared in agreement, however, over the suggestion of Chairman Nichols that the business privilege levy be renewed, but with obvious inequities eliminated.

Nichols said that a preliminary bill will be drafted next week, after which public hearings will be held.

While Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, was waging a fight for an income tax, Nichols continued to raise doubts both as to its constitutionality and revenue possibilities.

Compromise Possible.

A possible compromise appeared, however, in the suggestion of Dirksen that the income tax be incorporated as an experiment in the bill with the rates fixed low so that if the measure were held invalid the District would not be placed in a financial hole.

"I am for an income tax in theory," Nichols said, "but here in Washington you have a condition that is unparalleled in the world.

"There are two obstacles to the enactment of such a tax. The first is the question of its constitutionality, if applied to all persons earning income here, and the second is whether it would raise any substantial revenue if it were shot through with exemptions."

Dirksen argued that if the income tax were used as an auxiliary revenue producer for the first year, it could be tested in the courts.

Waxes Sarcastic.

A brief hearing by the sub-committee yesterday before it went into executive session was marked by sarcastic comments by Nichols on the recommendations of the Citizens' Advisory Tax Committee.

He told Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen that it seemed "a bit peculiar" to him that "a group of men representing business and civic interests object to the business privilege tax.

"I likewise can't understand," he added "why the general public is so interested in the trials and vicissitudes of business."

Chest Gets $50,542 After Drive's End

A total of $50,542 has been received by the Community Chest since the official campaign closed November 30, audited figures yesterday revealed.

This, officials asserted, brings total receipts for the tenth annual campaign to date to $1,883,060.80, or 91.45 per cent of the goal of $2,059,000.

Work is being continued by the campaign committee composed of 32 of Washington's outstanding civic leaders. Letters are being sent persons who failed to give in the last campaign or who might give more.

Another Picker Of 'Ten Best' Favors Laughs

West Coast Commentator Nominates Choices for Applause.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Everybody and his brother these days is picking the "10 best movies of 1937." Most of these lists start with "The Good Earth" and end with "The Life of Emile Zola," with eight other equally impressive pictures in between—but nobody apparently has tried to choose the 10 most enjoyable pictures available right now for an evening of real fun almost anywhere.

We'll attempt it here and if we don't stretch the list out to 10 that's because we're interested primarily in laughs, and not in tears, Greta Garbo and art.

1. "Atlantic Flight," a Monogram production, starring Dick Merrill, the aviator. Don't spend 85 cents to see this one, but if you can catch it for a quarter, it's a bargain, because it's so bad it's hilarious. The production is okay and the cast—aside from Merrill—is adequate, but he really is something to see upon the screen. It is evident that he is so scared that he trembles. Sweat beads upon his brow when he has to make love, while camera-fright makes his gestures so wooden you can almost drive nails in 'em.

2. "Stand In," a Walter Wanger production starring Joan Blondell and Leslie Howard. It's about a Hollywood movie studio and it features an imitation Swiss blizzard in which the director insists on genuine imported edelweiss, even though the snow hides it completely from the camera. It's a fast-moving satire on movie making and funny as they come.

Miss Faye Favored.

3. "You're a Sweetheart," a Universal production, featuring Alice Faye. Most of the critics damn this one with faint praise, but we chuckled at it for nearly two hours. We think you will, too.

4. "Every Day's a Holiday," produced by Paramount, and dominated by Mae West. She's the only woman in the picture, which is perhaps just as well, because La West is up to her old-time curvaceous tricks and she is a sight to see. The picture is full of new jokes, which, strangely enough, wouldn't offend a Sunday school teacher.

5. "Boots and Saddles," a Republic production, starring Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette. It's a rootin', tootin', shootin', cowboy film with villains biting the dust, herds of horses galloping and all the other trimmings of the old-time horse opera, but if it doesn't keep you on the edge of your seat, there's something wrong with your nerves. Burnette is a mighty funny comedian, too, while Autry's singing isn't nearly as bad as some experts have claimed.

A Dumb "Deteckative."

7. "Charlie Chan at Monte Carlo," a Twentieth Century-Fox production starring Warner Oland as the great Chinese detective, who is beset not only by murders galore, but by his dumb-detective son, Keye Luke. The latter is 26 years old and the only Chinese comedian outside of China, so far as we know. Even if he weren't, we'd still like to watch him pester his old man.

There ought to be three more pictures on this list to make the standard number of such movie compendiums, so we'll have to crib a bit from the other pickers and add "Snow White," "True Confession," and "Nothing Sacred," as also being truly funny.

One other picture which we liked was "Rosalie," the M. G. M. musical which a lot of folks claim wasn't worth the $1,500,000 it cost. It's got Nelson Eddy singing and Eleanor Powell dancing and they both do so well at their respective jobs that somehow we weren't bothered by the splendiferous scenery with which the studio chose to surround them, nor the 500 dancing girls who closed down the proceedings at intervals.

Finally there is the newsreel of the Panay sinking. It is tragic, we know, and we don't mean to be disrespectful of important international incidents, but somehow we can't keep from smiling over the plight of the machine gunner, sniping at Japanese bombers, who hurried so rapidly to his post that he forgot his pants.

Trailer Tires Gone, Player Camps Out

Warren William camped out all night.

He attended a movie some distance from his San Fernando Valley ranch. When he left the show, close to midnight, he found the trailer had been stripped of its tires. All the garages in the district were closed, so the actor hopped back in his car, turned on the electric heater, pulled down the wall bed and made himself comfortable for the night.

"And it really wasn't bad," he told Melvyn Douglas on the "Arsene Lupin Returns" set, at the studio, later. "As you know, my trailer has all the conveniences of a house and I really spent a very enjoyable night—even though it was in the street."

Whiskery.

Needs No Coach.

Franciska Gaal, Fredric March's co-star in "The Buccaneer," has dispensed with her English coach after a year of training in the language. She originally came from Budapest.

Gets Lesson.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Love and Hisses' Will Reveal a Nice, New Voice From an Ingenuous and Unsuspectedly Able Source

The Capitol's Impending Screen Attraction Proves Simone Simon a Vocalist of the First Rank; Sonja Henie Delayed One Day; Sale Brisk for "Between the "Devil;" a Ray Henderson Memorial; Notes.

YOU will be surprised by the "new" voice that is introduced to the screen in "Love and Hisses," the screen attraction scheduled to be shown for the first time in Washington at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning Friday.

BELL.

This voice belongs to an ingenuous young player who heretofore has been principally notable for a persistent pout and a charming French accent. She made her debut in the American cinema, if memory serves, in an item known as "Girl's Dormitory," but made her deepest impression in the audible film version of "Seventh Heaven," in which she shared with James Stewart the distinction of reviving the roles that first brought luster to the names of Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell.

It ought to be unnecessary, by now, to mention the fact that we have reference to that peculiarly subdued young actress, Simone Simon, whose duplex name causes Hollywood doormen to summon "Miss Simone Simon's car car!"

In "Love and Hisses," this enigmatic youngster reveals new facts of an obviously rich histrionic and musical endowment that have been vaguely hinted from Europe, where, one is led to believe, her primary fame rested upon her ability as an important figure in light musical entertainment on both stage and screen. The kid—and she is scarcely more than that—can sing!

During yesterday afternoon's private preview of her latest Twentieth Century-Fox vehicle, in the bandbox bijorium in the Twentieth Century Exchange, at New Jersey avenue and K street, the guys and gals of the press were increasingly bewildered that the vocal accomplishments of this young woman should not have been disclosed earlier to native audiences.

Mlle. Simon possesses a limpid soprano voice with high notes that suggest enduring memories of Tetrazzini and Galli-Curci in their purity, trueness and exquisite beauty, if not in their strength. There is nothing pyrotechnically operatic in the Simon vocal register, but there is something infinitely appealing about it that deserves to have been revealed to America before it had had time to wonder precisely what this gifted ingenue might be all about as an object of productional interest.

I repeat, you will be surprised.

"Love and Hisses," at base, is another pretentious effort to keep alive that famous feud between Ben Bernie, celebrated "maestro" of the stages and airwaves, and his indefatigable columnar sparring partner. It is a moderately happy blending of whistleable tunes, a tincture of satiric comedy and counterfeit melodrama that brings the highly nicotinized Mr. Bernie close to a bogus "doom." It is, of course, executed in Mr. Zanuck's most grandoise style.

The charade finds the grotesque Joan Davis straining a little more than usual for comic effects, in her acrobatic song numbers, and Bert Lahr tugging away at lines from many of which the spark has been inexplicably omitted, but these nebulous disappointments are rather more than atoned for by the interjection of the Raymond Scott Quintet, the Brewster Twins, the Peters Sisters, Chilton and Thomas and numerous other specialists into the gorgeous night club sequences. It is a gay, if not entirely inspired, gaucherie.

And the thing to watch and listen for is Simone Simon's singing. Master Napoleon Zanuck has pulled one out of the bag this time!

And while we are speaking of Twentieth Century-Fox, this might be as good a time as any to set the record straight on the matter of Sonja Henie's projected visit to the Capital to receive an Embassy decoration in the name of the King of Norway for superior feminine achievement. On the basis of a wire and corroborative phone call from Manager Sam Wheeler, of the local offices of the company, it was stated here yesterday that Miss Henie would arrive in town today at 2:20 p. m., by plane. A slight confusion with the embassy's date book gave rise to long-distance calls to Detroit yesterday which revealed that the skating star and former Olympic champion will not fly into Washington until tomorrow afternoon. She will come here from Cleveland. The embassy ceremony will bestow upon her the coveted title of "Knight of St. Olaf," an honor that has been accorded only four women before her since its royal establishment. The diminutive Miss Henie will be in the National Capital only a matter of a brief seven or eight hours, leaving, according to present plans, at approximately 11:30 p. m., tomorrow night, to continue the triumphant tour of her ice carnival—or whatever it is that is setting the hinterland by the ears.

* * * *

It is heartening to learn from Manager Eddie Plohn, of the National, and Treasurer Eddie Keller that the advance sale of seats for the "command performance" of the Shubert production of "Between the Devil," starring Jack Buchanan, Evelyn Laye and Adele Dixon, promises to be a complete sell-out.

This special performance, in tribute to the President's Birthday celebrations in behalf of the Warm Springs Foundation Fund for the combat of infantile paralysis, scheduled for Sunday night, January 23, at the National, already has sold out the second balcony at the flat price of $1 per seat and virtually exhausted the supply of first balcony tickets, scaled at $2 and $3.

There remain a reasonable supply of the $5 orchestra chairs, which probably will be snapped up by a musical-comedy-hungry populace long before the hour for the rise of the curtain on one of Broadway's current hit shows.

The moral of all this probably is not to let any of that proverbial grass grow under your feet in hiking down to the box-office to get yours.

* * * *

And that reminds me. Tonight is the night when the dramatic group of the University of Maryland moves its production of "Night Must Fall" from the college auditorium into the Wardman Park Theater as its gesture of friendliness toward the Warm Springs Foundation enterprise. All of the proceeds of the in-town performances will be donated to swell the relief fund. "Night Must Fall," it will be recalled, is the unique play in which Robert Montgomery, in association with Rosalind Russell and Dame May Whitty, achieved one of his most notable recent screen successes. It is being given a fine interpretation by the Maryland players, as anyone who has viewed the production will tell you.

A letter under date of January 7, 1938, from our old friend, Oliver M. Sayler, treasurer of the New York Theatrical Press Agents and chairman of the Ray Henderson Memorial Committee of that organization, brings word that a book is to be published as a memorial to the life and work of that eminent gentleman of the theater and of the press, who met a tragic death in an airplane crash in Athens Bay a few months ago, while returning from his world survey in the interest of Katharine Cornell's projected globe-circling tour in a repertoire of her most distinguished plays.

The volume, so Mr. Sayler tells me, will not be a symposium of fulsome encomiums. As he says, "Ray would have hated that." It will, on the contrary, be comprised of a recapitulation of the more notable contributions Ray Henderson made to the press on behalf of the theatrical attractions he so capably and so intellectually represented. We have been requested to contribute excerpts from the columns of The Post—a friendly function we shall endeavor to perform in the spirit in which the book is intended.

In the death of Ray Henderson the theater lost one of its most competent and most lovable figures. This department mourns him deeply as a friend and companion of many years of helpful effort to the art he loved so passionately.

Comes a wire we are happy to reprint. It says: "As a 'follow' to your story last week, I would tell you, first, that on Saturday, January 15, I join the home-office staff of Jay Emanuel Publications, in Philadelphia, as editorial assistant. There are no doubts in my mind that the eight years of association with you played a generous part in giving me the background to pursue the duties of Washington correspondent for the National Exhibitor, from which I have been promoted. WILL A. WHITNEY."

The best of luck to an old associate who rendered conscientious and faithful service for almost a decade. It's nice to see the boys get along.

* * * *

And since reminders seem to have a definite place in today's column, there seems to be no reason why you should not paste in your hat a memorandum that tonight is the night Burton Holmes, that incorrigible travel-hound and literate descriptive lecturer, inaugurates his new series of five travel-talks in the auditorium of the Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest.

His topic for this evening will be "A 1937 Motor Tour in Brightest Africa"—as opposed to the customary "Dark Continent."

Will Grace New Week's Screens

STARS THAT SHINE.

Above, Simone Simon, the demure young actress who emerges as a singing star of the first rank in the leading feminine role in "Love and Hisses," the new Twentieth Century-Fox production to be shown on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning Friday. Right, Alice Faye, noted singing comedienne, who returns to the local screen at RKO-Keith's next week, also beginning Friday, in "You're a Sweetheart," her latest vehicle.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 11.—Mutterings: Fifteen years in Hollywood—and still I feel a murderous impulse at the sight of chorus boys with plucked eyebrows. Getting personal: Perhaps someone should hint to Franchot Tone that interviewers find his stodgy attitude just as boring as he finds their questions. Ask most of the screen's youngthings to pose for a picture and they run to get their bathing suits. Growl: If Jeanette MacDonald cannot break her dogs from jumping on people, she ought to furnish overalls for her guests.

JEANETTE MacDONALD.

Suppose newspaper stories about a 27-year-old nonprofessional who has six divorces to her credit will stir some of our glamour gals to greater efforts. Secret ambition: To see a western in which the hero pauses, every 20 shots or so, to reload his trusty six-shooter. Good nickname for Geraldine Spreckles, considering the source of her former husband's millions, would be "Sugar." Frantic urge: To trample under foot those candid camera fiends who haunt the entrances of every Filmville cafe. Wondering muse: If Simone Simon, Connie Bennett and other firebrands of their ilk are going to turn "sissie" and behave, what will I have to "mutter" about?

* * * *

Gene Raymond is a master of the art of looking industrious while doing nothing. Gluttons for punishment: Harry Cohen, of Columbia—with Grace Moore already in his hair, is trying to develop another prima-donna in Edith Fellowes. Nervous itch: To warn Rochelle Hudson that sophisticated pouts are as passe as the bustle. Wonder how the Ritz Brothers would rate in an I. Q. test?

* * * *

Bill and Ed Aber, brothers who look enough alike to pass for identical twins, lived until a couple of years ago in a little California town. Their one great ambition was to go to West Point. They arranged their studies with that goal in view and secured the interest of the Congressman from their district. But only one appointment to the Academy was to be had—and Bill Aber, as the older brother, was given the preference. Ed came to Hollywood to try his luck at acting, worked extra and finally landed a real role in one of the year's biggest productions, "Rosalie." In it he plays a West Pointer!

* * * *

Speaking of brothers, I am reminded of Frank and Ralph Morgan—and one of the strangest ironies in all Hollywood. Both of them won fame on the stage, both are fine actors. The other day I played golf with Ralph, who told me glumly that the one part on which he had set his heart for 1938 has just been refused him. It is a comedy role and the producer decided that Ralph Morgan was "not the type"—that he needed a man more like his brother, Frank. That's where the irony comes in. On the stage, Ralph was a famous comedian, while Frank, whose sole stock in trade now is his ability to generate laughs, played nothing but heavy drama.

* * * *

On the set where "Bluebeards' Wife" is being filmed, Gary Cooper and I were "ribbing" Director Ernst Lubitsch about being superstitious. Gary cited several charges, all of which Lubitsch indignantly denied, and as an after thought brought up the fact that Edward Everett Horton has worked in every Lubitsch picture—that some of his roles have been written in to provide an excuse for his casting. "Rank superstition!" he scoffed. "I am not superstitious—not about not'ing!" Herr Ernst shouted. "It is just that my pictures are always lucky with Eddie in the cast!"

Unusual Fad.

Anna May Wong, Chinese actress, currently appearing in "Daughter of Shanghai," has three large trunks filled with theater programs which she has saved since her early childhood in Los Angeles.

South to North.

South to North, Cecil B. DeMille has charted his course, planning "Hudson's Bay Company" in the wilds of Canada to follow "The Buccaneer," filmed in Louisiana bayous.

Pioneer.

Cecil B. DeMille, producer-director of "The Buccaneer," is descended from Anthony DeMille, the first Dutch settler in Manhattan, who arrived in 1689.

Dorsey played the songs, it became the No. 1 tune, and won the A. S. C. A. P. award. Edwards, who wrote the song originally, isn't a member of A. S. C. A. P., so was ineligible for the prize and Green won it. As a Christmas gift. Green gave half the prize money to Edwards" . . . "The musicians who got $100 a week at 'The Cradle Will Rock,' although they don't furnish any music," a union official assures at Dave's, "buy $2.20 orchestra seats to watch the performance" . . . "Of course I'm buying stocks," Ben Bernie confides at Lindy's. "All my investments are handled by Sergius L. Rolbein, of Ira Haupt & Co. He handles my dough. I trust him implicitly. He's married to my former wife!"

Who Is the Wrestling Champ and Why?

By Shirley Povich.

The one argument we have gone to great lengths to duck concerns the perennial debate about who is the world's wrestling champion. The fact is, we have never considered it a really burning question or that the world was waiting with bated breath for the correct answer. Who is the world wrestling champ, who struck John? and who killed Cock Robin? are three questions which may be covered with either one of two answers (1) Who cares? and (2) What of it?

POVICH.

But, willy nilly, we seem to have been dragged into the dispute. Out in St. Louis, Mr. Tom Packs, who promotes wrestling shows and consequently takes his wrestlers very seriously, has entered objection to a recent observation of this department to the effect that Lou Thesz, the world heavyweight champion of St. Louis, was not generally recognized as the world champ.

* * * *

"The following is anent your "This Morning" column of January 6," Mr. Packs writes. "To satisfy your apparent amazement as to how Thesz came into the title, I am enclosing herewith the only authentic record of the history of the championship from the reign of George Hackenschmidt (1905) to Lou Thesz (1937).

"What I would like to know is just how did you arrive at the incorrect conclusion that Bronko Nagurski, Dean Detton or who-have-you might be any kind of a championship claimant in face of the enclosed record of the changing of the title?

"You would also note that Billy Sandow is and always has been the manager of former Champion Everett Marshall and that I had no part in his management. Moreover, the writer is NOT the manager of Lou Thesz!

"For your information, the writer, in the interest of wrestling, relayed all possible news on the new champion so that you—as well as others—might intelligently further interest of the game, you can take the word of yours truly that the new champion is capable of throwing fellows like Nagurski three times within an hour, so great is this 22-year-old mat marvel."

We wouldn't know whether Nagurski would consent to being thrown three times in an hour by young Thesz, but we are indebted to Promoter Packs for what pretends to be a thoroughly official record of the history of the world's wrestling championship since 1905. The titles changed hands like this:

1905—Frank Gotch defeated Hackenschmidt for title.
1906—Fred Beek defeated Gotch for title.
1906—Gotch defeated Fred Beek for title.
1913—Gotch retired as champion.
1915—Joe Stecher defeated Cutler for title.
1917—Earl Caddock defeated Stecher for title.
1920—Stecher defeated Caddock for title.
1921—Stanislaus Zbyszko defeated Lewis for title.
1925—Stecher defeated Zbyszko for title.
1928—Lewis defeated Stecher for title.
1929—Gus Sonnenberg defeated Lewis for title.
But meanwhile—
1930—Londos defeated Shikat.
And then—
1933—Jim Browning defeated Lewis.
1935—Danno O'Mahoney defeated Londos.
1935—O'Mahoney also defeated Don George, who had been "carrying on" as the "champion" since defeating Sonnenberg in 1931.
1936—Everett Marshall defeated Ali Baba.
1937—Lou Thesz defeated Marshall.

Apprised of these statistics from Promoter Packs, Joe Turner, Washington's wrestling impresario, uttered a loud snort yesterday and said that Packs' history of the crown was screwy beginning with 1936.

Eastern promoters, according to Turner, recognized Dave Levin as champion following his defeat of Ali Baba despite the action of the New Jersey commission in returning the title to Ali Baba. Thus, Turner traces the championship from that point:

1937—Bronko Nagurski defeated Detton for title.

* * * *

"If there is a legitimate world champion, it's Nagurski," Turner declared. "But if you want to know who the best wrestler in the world is, that's easy. There ain't a guy living who can throw Jim Londos in a shootin' match."

Catholic U. Quint Bows To Marshall

Cards Prove Faulty at Shot-Making as Invaders Win.

By Bob Garrison.

A group of football players in Catholic University basketball uniforms fumbled their way to defeat last night in the C. U. gymnasium, allowing the John Marshall five, of Jersey City, N. J., to return home with a 47-to-34 victory.

Led by Whitey Ambrose, their high-scoring forward, the entire Catholic U. team experienced a pitiful off-night that saw no member able to score more than twice from the floor. Ambrose, usually a deadly accurate set-shot artist, missed with remarkable consistency, and the other boys fared little better.

The Justices from Jersey City were a fighting group of law students coached by Matty Begovich, former all-American at St. John's University. Ability to make their shots when opportunities presented themselves resulted in victory.

The Cards did jump to an 8-4 lead early in the first half but then the siege set in. The Brookland boys just couldn' get the lid off the basket. They passed well enough and worked the ball into position in creditable manner, but that was as far as it went. Ambrose, who had scored 77 points in the previous games, was the worst offender.

As a result, John Marshall went out in front at 11-10 and then never relinquished that lead. The visitors led, 24-17, at half as Pete Weber went on a scoring spree with nine points.

Things got steadily worse in the second half. Ambrose was held scoreless from the floor. And although they stuck with him unnecessarily, it was not so much the fault of Jimmy Dooley and Jimmy Mallon, Wayne's guards. He missed more than 15 shots from position.

Things weren't so bad until the Lawyers went from 38-32 to 47-32 without the Cards moving the cords. Capt. Bill Rosenbauer and Jack Killat, a pot-shot artist, led the way.

Two young business men named Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis walked into the office of Clark Griffith yesterday, talked themselves into pay raises, and then signed to play shortstop and third base, respectively, for the Nats next season.

It was no mild mass movement by Travis and Lewis in the contract signing negotiations; no attempt of the Nats' infield to present a solid front if any salary arguments with Griffith should arise. The young men are merely inseparable.

They are room-mated. They look somewhat alike, they talk with the same Southern drawl, they eat alike, they like the same movies, wear similar clothes. So when the time came to sign contracts they traveled to Washington together, wedged through Griffith's office door as a pair, and ultimately were signed almost as a team.

Both players received "substantial raises," Griffith declared, although he followed custom in refusing to divulge the salaries of his ball players.

"Ball players of today are getting smart," added Griffith. "They know very well that they do better on their contracts when they come to see me in person. They always pry a bit more out of me.

"But don't print that," said Griffith, laughing. "I don't want my ball players to think that all they have to do is pay me a personal visit to get those outlandish salaries some of 'em think they ought to have."

Both Travis and Lewis enjoyed brilliant seasons in 1937, Travis blossoming as the fifth leading hitter in the league with an average of .344 to lead the Nats at bat. Lewis emerged as the hardest-hitting third baseman in the league with his .314 average.

Travis, who is believed to have drawn a $6,000 salary in 1937, was raised to $7,500 it was reported. Lewis, a $5,500 performer last year, reportedly was given an increase to $7,000.

Gevinson Given Shot With Sicilia Monday

Lefty Lou 'On Spot' Here—He Must Redeem Self in This Bout or Fade Into Fistic Background.

By Bob Garrison.

Lou Gevinson, for the third time in his abbreviated professional ring career, hits the comeback trail next Monday when he faces Armanda Sicilia, the tough Chicago featherweight. The chips are down; either the local boy wins or they can hang crepe on his ring career.

It will be Lefty Lou's first trip to the ring since Tony Dupre, the Manchester, N. H. cutie, beat him unmercifully to take an eight-round decision just when Lou was regaining prestige lost last summer when Joey Archibald knocked him out.

More or less a favorite since he turned money fighter December, 1936, the Southwest youngster has failed to live up to what admirers first envisioned for him. Each time they jumped on his bandwagon to sing the praises of his potent left-hand sock, some opponent hung one on him and as a result, fans are expected to consider this Lou's last stand.

Either he wins this bout with Sicilia or he fades into obscurity. This is the third comeback and it's more than likely the old adage "Third time and out," will apply should be losc again.

Wants Shot at Dupre.

Sicilia is a big dose for a fellow trying to come back. But that's the way Lou wants it. He is intent upon making up for lost ground. He feels that a victory over Sicilia, who is held in high regard by most local critics, will help no end in the business of getting a return match with Dupre. It's like shooting for the moon.

The Chicago boy has fought here three times and has two wins and a questionable loss for his efforts. He defeated Baby Manuel in his first showing and then met Dupre. It was a whale of a fight, with Sicilia leading the battle all the way. Somehow or other, the judges voted in favor of the New Englander, but at any rate he had a much harder time whipping Sicilia (if he did) than he did with Gevinson.

His most impressive showing was his last, against Harry Jeffra, the bantamweight champion. Sicilia charged into the Baltimore ruler of the 120-pounders, and several times made the champion hustle to stay in the fight. He lost, but only as a result of Jeffra's fast finish.

Gevinson began in the professional business as though he was the answer to Washington's prayer for a champion. He went along smoothly until he met a fellow named Johnny Pena, who won a decision. Then he had to start anew. He soon made up lost ground, however, by getting another crack at his victor.

Made Good Second Time.

He made good the second time, knocking out Pena in the seventh. But once again he was interrupted by a tough little fellow Washington has come to regard as the best featherweight to fight here since Petey Sarron, Joey Archibald. Archibald was too experienced for him. It was a great scrap, but the referee stopped the bout in the ninth round to save Gevinson's face, which was badly cut, from further damage and awarded the bout to the Providence puncher.

Again Lou had to retrace his steps. This time it was harder. He won several in a row, but he didn't seem to be himself. Then he was matched with Dupre, winner of an elimination tourney which included such entries as Ray Ingram, Baby Manuel and Sicilia.

What Dupre did to him will be remembered as one of the worst face beatings a fighter has taken here. Only Lou's fighting heart kept him in there the distance. He never was able to land his trusty left, while Dupre was pecking away at his features with cutting rights and lefts.

Now, he realizes that this is his last chance and that it's no gravy train, this bout with Sicilia. He still holds a Government position and unless he manages to win Monday, the only thing he's likely to be punching from then on is Uncle Sam's time clock.

Guckeyson Will Return To Maryland

Failure in 'Math' Said to Be Cause of Star's Return.

By the Associated Press.

Bill Guckeyson, the University of Maryland football star who entered West Point last fall, is returning to Maryland within a week, his hopes for an Army career temporarily blighted by a scholastic deficiency.

Frank Dobson, head coach at the university, announced the former Terp lost a hard battle with academy mathematics and would study at Maryland until next fall. He then will take an examination for readmission to West Point.

He is expected here within a week, Dobson said.

He added he had heard reports Guckeyson would enter professional football, but discounted them.

"I do not think there is a chance of him doing that," the Terrapin mentor said. "Certainly, I will do everything in my power to stop him.

"Bill has a brilliant career ahead of him, but not in professional football. We expected him to have trouble with 'math' when he entered West Point, but we hoped he would get by. It bothered him all fall, despite the extra work he did.

"By coming back here and studying, he will have the opportunity of going back to the Point in the fall. After that, he should have no trouble."

Guckeyson loomed as a potential Army football threat until the academy last month decided to adopt eligibility rules enforced by the majority of colleges. These allow an athlete only three years of varsity competition.

Guckeyson played three years of football, but is still eligible for one or two years of baseball, basketball and track at the academy.

Tech Snares Lead In Interhigh Race

Greatly Improved Eastern Team Flashes Fine Form to Beat Riders—Merrill Heddings Leads Tech Crew to Victory.

By Jack Munhall.

Tech, winning in the nightcap, took sole possession of the lead as co-leading Western drew an open date. Eastern and Roosevelt made their debuts in the series.

It was a different, vastly-improved Eastern five that trampled over Roosevelt in the opener. Held fairly even in the first quarter by the Rough Riders, Eastern came back with a rush in the latter part of the second quarter to display an attack which quickly transformed the game into a rout.

Roosevelt was never able to take the lead from the Northeasters, who fought with as much spirit as any Eastern team has ever shown in the series. It is to Roosevelt's credit that it managed to keep the score close as long as it was.

Although the entire Eastern first team of "Soup" Hancock, Lee Lusby, Clint Quantrille, Ralph Matera and Russ Lombardy worked in harmony, it was Lombardy who sparked its tremendous drive.

Lombardy Everywhere.

Lombardy, an all-high guard choice last year, was everywhere on the floor to direct his team's attack and lead the defense. He fought for every point, even when the score favored Eastern by 15 points. Although leading handily throughout the third quarter, the regulars never ceased to pour through points until replaced in the final minutes.

Lombardy's leading assistant was towering Clint Quantrille. He scored five baskets, to run Lombardy a race for scoring honors. Lombardy, though, hit the hoop consistently in the latter part of the game and finished with 15 points.

Eastern led, 14 to 5, going into the second period, boosted this margin to 22 to 9 at half, and was out in front, 40 to 11, at the end of the third stanza, in which its showed to best advantage, scoring 15 points.

The reason for Tech's surprising victory was 6 feet 5 inches tall, and his name is Merrill Heddings. Held out of the starting line because he is a February graduate who will be of no help in the second half of the series, he entered the game in the third period, when Central was threatening Tech's early lead. McKinley had jumped into the van and held a 19-to-9 advantage at half time.

Central Opens With Rush.

But Central opened the third period with a rush and pulled to 13-15. However, that was before the insertion of Mr. Heddings. It was funny to watch Heddings, scaling inches above the next tallest man, stand beneath the basket, take throws from teammates and drop the ball into the net.

His efforts netted him 10 points during the little-more-than-a-quarter he played. Central, during that time, was also registering, mostly on pot shots, but its five could not match the output of one man.

Vic De Leon, Tech center, was another potent reason for the victory. He was the guiding hand, passing with skill, guarding with zeal, and shooting, when he did, with accuracy. His total of 7 markers was the nearest approach to Heddings'. Leroy Curtis also was impressive for Tech.

For Central, John Fanning, center, Leonard Sokol, forward, and Archie Panago, guard, contributed

Armstrong Favored Over Venturi Tonight

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Little Henry Armstrong, generally acclaimed 1937's outstanding ring performer, launches a new campaign tomorrow night in a 10-round fight with Enrico Venturi, one of the best of the lightweights, in Madison Square Garden.

The sensational Los Angeles Negro, who topped off a streak of 27 consecutive victories by winning the world's featherweight title from Petey Sarron, of Birmingham, is a 5-to-9 shot to defeat the Italian, but no better than even money to cut another notch in his knockout gun.

Last year Armstrong kayoed 26 of his 27 opponents. The only man to stay the distance with him was Aldo Spoldi, another Italian and Venturi's arch rival. Enrico will put out all he has to finish on his feet.

Armstrong has been as successful against the 135-pounders as he has against the featherweighs. Some of the leading lightweight contenders have been victims of his slashing attack.

Venturi punches well, can take a wallop and has plenty of heart. He is fast and smart. If Armstrong knocks him out it will be the first such mark on the Italian's record.

Pattycake, at $7.90, Captures Closing Feature at Tropical Park

10,000 See Last Races Of Meeting

Our Willie Runs Second as Winner Sets Fastest Time.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 11. The most successful early meeting in the history of the Gables Racing Association closed here this afternoon with more than 10,000 fans viewing the final program under sunny skies. Heading the final program was the Everglades Handicap. Norman W. Church, of California, whose horses raced here for the first time this winter and with excellent results, was represented by the winner in Pattycake, a Blue Larkspur filly, that clicked by a half length.

Jesse Spencer's Our Willie closed second choice to Old Nassau in the field of five headed I. J. Collins' Bernard F. for the place. Scudder was a distant fourth, with Old Nassau a laboring last. The latter tired trying to keep up with the early pace.

Pattycake, recently a good second, returned $7.90 and ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:43 4-5, fastest time of the meeting, under Vere Thompson.

The 20-day meeting topped the 25-day similar session of a year ago by about 20 per cent in attendance and approximately 15 per cent in wagering. The average handle for this meeting is expected to hit $220,000.

Pattycake made all her own pace and ran a very game race under Thompson's expert guidance. The Church colorbearer raced Bernard F into defeat, then had to withstand a strong challenge from Our Willie in the final quarter-mile.

The gay closing day crowd received a scare just after the first race when Apprentice Warren Snyder, who gained a reputation as pilot for George Phillips on New York tracks the past summer, was sent to Jackson Memorial Hospital for examination after a mishap that occurred after the first race on today's getaway program. While the horses were pulling up, Snyder's mount, Many Moons, which finished second, was banged against the fence by another horse. Snyder's left leg was injured and he was hastily examined at the track hospital, where it was reported that a bone might have snapped in the leg.

Chancery, a well-played son of Chance Play ridden by Johnny Longden, who began the day tied with Eddie Arcaro with 15 winners apiece at the meeting, won the event by a length and a half. The gelding rushed up from a rather indifferent beginning, swept around the leaders turning for home and drew clear to pay 4 to 1. Many Moons just got up to head the favored Exhort for second money. The latter weakened after overtaking Cosmic Ray.

John Hay Whitney, New York sportsman and racing commission member, had his silks on display for the first time at the meeting in the second race. They were borne to victory by the 3-year-old maiden Bait, a 3-to-1 favorite. Arcaro caught up with Longden by guiding his sixteenth winner home. Bait led all the way and registered by a half length over Moorish. Minstrel Star lost the place by a length.

Noble Boy had all the speed in the third number, a 6-furlong sprint for 4-year-old platers. The Jean Valjean gelding stepped to the front in a few strides and opened up a safe lead over Flyahead. The latter was hard ridden but could not gain an inch and trailed the Bomar Stable's representative by two lengths. Debate, which attracted most of the play, began slowly. He made up considerable ground, finishing a half length behind Flyahead. Noble Boy paid $13.70.

J. P. (Sammy) Smith, Beau Brummel of the race tracks, sent out Join Us, at 5 to 1, to capture the honors in the fourth contest, in which 3-year-old claimers were on display. Join Us, a daughter of Teddy, carried the red and black banner and staged a rousing rally through the short stretch to beat the fast-stepping Sure Cloud by a length. man disappointed many backers by finishing a poor third, five lengths away. The cold tired chasing the pace.

CHANCERY, going in his best form, moved up rapidly on the outside in the run down the backstretch, came around and disposed of the leaders in the final furlong. MANY MOONS, quickest to begin, lacked early foot and was outrun, closed gamely in the final furlong and were EXHORT down in the last strides. EXHORT gradually bettered his position while slipping through on the inside in the first half mile, was bumped by the tiring COSMIC RAY entering the stretch, but closed gamely.

BAIT, away forwardly, held his opposition safe for speed and cleverly rated in front, continued courageously when it came to a drive and outlasted MOORISH. The latter, away slowly, gradually improved his position on the extreme outside and was wearing the winner down at the finish. MINSTREL STAR, on the inside, suffered repeated interference in the early stages, swung around the leaders in the final furlong and closed resolutely.

Daily Double, Chancery and Bait, Paid $77.90.

NOBLE BOY took command at once, drew clear in the opening furlong and held away the entire trip. FLYAHEAD broke well, but dropped back, moved up swiftly when in stride, went in nearest pursuit of the winner, but was unable to improve his position. DEBATE, sore going to the post and slow to get going, saved much ground in the final three furlongs and finished stoutly. ZACA went forwardly on the outside all the way.

JOIN US, going forwardly on the inside until midway around the turn, moved up with determination under pressure, came around the leader at the furlong pole and won going away. SURE CLOUD found his stride rapidly, set a fast early pace, held on gamely under punishment, but was no match for the winner. FEEDMAN, a keen contender all the way, faltered when the final issue came but outlasted PELTER.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. The Everglades Handicap. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:09. Off 4:11½. Winner, Norman W. PATTYCAKE moved to the front rapidly going to the first turn and, setting a fast pace throughout, continued courageously when the final test came and outlasted his opponents. OUR WILLIE, going well up under slight restraint, moved up menacingly on the outside leaving the backstretch, appeared ready to pass the leaders, but shied when Thompson struck his mount straightening out into the stretch. BERNARD F., prominent, but in tight quarters on the inside, was compelled to pull up approaching the quarter-mile pole, slipped through entering the stretch and made a game effort, but could not get up.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Onrush. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:40. Off 4:41. Winner, A. J. Abel's b. g. ONRUSH, away poorly, improved his position in the last half mile while circling the field and outlasted MELODY MAID.

HALLE, hustled to the front going to the first turn, was rated in front in the early running, shook off AL CARLYS entering the stretch and maintained his advantage under a light hand ride. AL CARLYS, on the outside and in close attendance of the leader the entire trip, continued gamely to punishment and outlasted JOLYON. The latter, well handled, responded to punishment and finished stoutly on the outside.

Hueu Is Winner At Fair Grounds

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, Jan. 11 (AP).—C. Troutt's aged bay gelding Hueu romped off the the big end of the purse in the opening and feature race at the Fair Grounds today.

Opposed by eight rivals, Hueu came rolling home in front of the field and paid $8.60 for $2 straight in the mutuels. Miss M. Hodge's The Rew and F. Mallory's Baby Sweep finished in a dead heat for second place.

J. Lane's Sadie F. set the early pace, but faded as the field hit the stretch. Hueu, third at the half, raced into command on the run for home and withstood all challenges.

The winner covered the 6 furlongs over a heavy track in 1:15 4-5.

At The Post...

Dear Al: Selections at Hialeah.

With a good share of horsedom's royalty, headed by the great War Admiral, in its barns, beautiful Hialeah opens its gates for business. The racing scene shifts over from Tropical Park with every evidence that it will be a successful session. The sport gathered momentum at the other track and officials confidently expect both crowds and betting to reach record proportions. I understand the State racing commissioners, in meeting here, are contemplating a move to do away with the starting gates now generally used throughout the country. They recommend that racing go back to the old spring barrier or the walkup system. I wonder if they are going to sell their autos and ride home in buggies, too. There is about as much chance of getting a good walkup start now as there is of getting Joseph E. Widener to imitate a flamingo. The old tape barrier, lacking protection to horses, went out with the horse-drawn fire engine. It is O. K. to talk about starting the horses this way and that and it might be possible to train a few good horses to start from anything, however the selling platers, the backbone of every racing program, can't be taught new tricks. I'll admit that starting from a standing position and often out of hand serves to break down horses, but it is the only practical way that they can be lined up with an even break for all. BILL.

First race — Sweet Patrice has worked well, Clocker Mike reports, and might be as good as anything in this hop, skip and jump. Jousting and Huskie Queen may make money appearances.

Second race—Spring Melody appears nicely placed in this event and needs only to show a best effort. Cal Rainey, a winner at Tropical, promises to be a keen factor in this field and is due respect. Mythical King for the minor award.

Third race—Jair and Clocks appear to have an edge on the others in this rather open race. Both are fit as hands can make horses. Great Haste may like this cushioned track.

Fourth race — Stocks did about everything asked of him at the other track and promises to do a lot of running here. Muscatine and Up And Up to take care of the place and show.

Fifth race — Preeminent and Fraidy Cat may run one, two in this event. They are teamed and out of a stable that has won this race for three years. Wise Prince should take a peek at the money.

Sixth race — Mucho Gusto did himself proud at Tropical and should keep right on winning. Paradisical is speedy and a threat in any field. Bow and Arrow probably will take down a portion of the pay-off.

Seventh race—Live One likes this route and appears to be well placed. I'm going to string along. Chance King may take the measure of St. Moritz for the place money.

Eighth race—One Chance comes to this event recommended by smart efforts at Tropical. Needs only to run his real race. Mine Boy and Back Fence to complete the money bracket.

Best Bet—One Chance.

War Admiral Appears Ready for Turf Tests

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 11 (AP).—War Admiral, Samuel D. Riddle's champion colt, was out on the track today for limbering up exercise and he stepped 6 furlongs in 1:20. The bay son of Man O' War was only breezing and appears to be in the best possible physical condition.

The triple crown winner has not put on very much weight since his last appearance at Pimlico, but he seems to be in better condition, full of pep and eager to go. The Derby winner had up plenty of weight in his gallop and is rounding into shape gradually, exactly the way Trainer George Conway believes is best for the colt.

Bobby Riggs Heads Miami Net Advance

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 11. The favorites, paced by top-seeded Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, moved into the quarter-finals of the Nautilus Hotel tournament without a casualty today.

Riggs required three sets to dispose of Oscar Evans, of Miami, 6—3, 3—6, 6—0, in the second round but snapped back into form to eliminate Lewis Duff, of Montreal, 6—4, 6—1, later in the day.

The young Chicagoan loafed a bit in his second set with Evans, making frequent errors, but was in rare form as he clinched the match without the loss of a game in the third set.

Third-seeded Wayne Sabin, of Hollywood, Calif., moved into the round of eight by trouncing Dick McKee, Miami Beach schoolboy, 6—3, 6—4.

Martin Buxby, of Miami, seeded fourth, also had to play two matches to reach the quarter-finals, beating Bill Hardie, of the University of Miami, 6—2, 6—3, and Count George Du Manoir, of Paris 6—1, 7—5.

The count earlier had disposed of Prince Sherbatoff, of New York, 6—1, 6—1, and put up a game battle before bowing to Buxby in the final set of their match.

Wilmer Hines, of Hollywood, Calif., eliminated Arthur Prochaska, of Hartford, Conn. 6—1, 6—3; George Pero, of Miami, ousted George Toley, of Los Angeles, 7—5, 7—5, and Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., defeated Campbell Gillespie, of Atlanta, 6—4, 6—0, to reach the quarter-finals.

Tomorrow Riggs meets Hines, Buxby plays Cooke and Kovacs faces Pero. Sabin will meet the winner of a third-round match between Weston Painter, of Milwaukee, and Marvin Anthony, of Miami Beach.

Second round summaries:

George Pero, Miami, defeated Bill Boulware, Atlanta, 6—4, 9—7; Martin Buxby, Miami, defeated Bill Hardie, University of Miami, 6—2, 6—3; Count George Du Manoir, Paris, defeated Prince Sherbatoff, New York, 6—1, 6—1; Elwood Cooke, Portland, Oreg., defeated Harold Schlesger, Columbia, Pa., 6—1, 6—1; Bobby Riggs, Chicago, defeated Oscar Evans, Miami, 6—3, 3—6, 6—0.

Western Hi 28-14 Victor

Pausing in the midst of defending its interhigh championship, Western's basketball team played host to Washington-Lee yesterday in the Western gym and won an easy 28-14 decision.

Bob Custer, slim, sharp-shooting forward, scored 14, almost half his team's total points, to lead Western to victory. Johnny Anderson, visitors' guard, tossed in 7.

Having things pretty much its own way, the Georgetown five worked slowly, leading 18-6, at the half. Second stringers saw plenty of action in the second half.

Georgetown Meets Terp Five Tonight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Hot embers of Washington's keenest athletic rivalry will be fanned into fresh flames tonight at Tech High School where Georgetown and Maryland tangle in their annual court debate. Action starts at 8:30 o'clock with a preliminary game an hour earlier.

On the strength of their stunning and decisive victory over Temple the Hoyas must be regarded as favorites over their suburban rivals, but Maryland money is plentiful and the Terps will not lack financial or moral support.

The Hoyas will present the same array of talent that ran roughshod over Temple in their initial Eastern Conference game, and a similar performance tonight will be fatal to Maryland's hopes. A notorious "first-half" team, Georgetown demonstrated in the Temple game that it has the power and stamina to maintain the same blistering pace in the final half when on its game.

Maryland, while averaging only .500 for the season thus far, with three victories in six games, showed enough improvement in its last four games to rate at least an outside chance of winning. The Terps defeated Baltimore about as handily as George Washington turned the trick, and the Colonials are being hailed as one of the East's topnotch quintets.

Georgetown will rely on Mike Petroskey at center, Harry Bassin and Joe Murphy at forwards, Hank Bertrand and Tommy Nolan at guards to stop its rival. Maryland, while its line-up is not definitely settled, very likely will have Charley Norton at center, Waverly Wheeler and George Knepley at forwards, Milton Mullitz or Eddie Johnson and Coleman Headley at guards.

The game will revive the old problem of a zone defense, used by Maryland, against man-for-man type of guarding, and a quick-breaking attack, also Maryland, against a slower style of working the ball in for snowbird shots. This set-up augurs well for a fast, close game.

Georgetown won last year's game in comparatively easy style to take a 2-1 lead in the series, but the Hoyas are behind on the current all-sports record, having dropped a 12-2 decision in football to the Terps.

Eagles Lose By 38 to 27

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Jan. 11.—American University's basketball team was handed its first defeat here tonight as a fighting Johns Hopkins quintet took advantage of the Eagles' ragged playing to win, 38 to 27. Led by Carl Raisin, slight guard, the Jay Birds stepped out to an early 8-point lead. In the first half, when Hickey, Bartlett and Rogers found their shooting eyes the visitors managed to gain a 14-to-12 edge. This was quickly dissipated as Lee Moore, towering Jay Bird center dropped a field shot through the bucket to tie the game 14-all as the half ended.

Howard Five Victor, 35-22

With a previous night's victory to their credit, the Bison quintet of Howard University last night again defeated the North Carolina State College five, from Durham, 35-22.

Harold Johnson, an Atlantic City lad, made 17 of his team's points, and the additional five were made by "Pop" Freeman, also hailing from the world's playground.

Out in front from the start, the Bisons held a 6-point lead practically throughout the game, until the final five minutes when, with their second string on the court, they extended the margin.

Cotton Steady; January, 8.59

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—An early advance in cotton today attracted increased pressure, but, following moderate reactions, prices again turned steadier toward the close. March, which had eased from 8.64 to 8.56, ended at 8.62, with final quotations 2 to 6 points net higher.

The market opened higher and rallied a few points further. Hedge selling, liquidation and offerings from locals and New Orleans caused the list to sell off to net losses of 2 to 5 points by midday. Trade buying on the setback accompanied reports of the second day of large cotton goods sales at steadier prices.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was irregular today. January held relatively firm on short covering. But later deliveries, after advancing 2 to 3 points, declined under increased liquidation. Final prices were 11 points higher on January, but 3 to 4 points lower on later deliveries. Sales 176 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal. January closed 7.54, March 7.49, May 7.52, July 7.54.

Penn Executive Addresses D. C. Underwriters

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Qualifications essential for successful life underwriting were reviewed yesterday by Holgar J. Johnson, Pittsburgh general agent of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., in an address at the January luncheon meeting of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at the Willard Hotel.

Discussing the subject, "What Are We After?" Mr. Johnson told more than 125 executives and salesmen that the principal objective of the profession should be an elevation of standards of practice for its representatives. This, in the speaker's opinion, could be obtained through a career method requiring educational background and an understanding of the purposes of life insurance programs.

Making an analysis of a large number of successful underwriters, Mr. Johnson, a former vice president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, found that they all served more than 100 new policyholders a year; that they carried their services to people who had the means to buy the insurance they needed; they made friendships on such a sound basis that their clients sought their aid in planning insurance programs and they had definite plans for securing their clients' economic independence.

Dr. E. B. Wyatt, formerly of the Social Security Administration, who has been selected as educational director of the American College of Life Underwriters, explained the latter institution's mission. President Paul H. Primm of the local association presided at the meeting, to which 24 new members were welcomed. Entertainment was furnished by William F. Raymond, vocalist.

Mutual Benefit Life.

Recording the largest year's business since 1931, the Washington agency of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. celebrated recently with an annual luncheon at the Hotel Hamilton, given by H. Lawrence Choate, chartered life underwriter and general agent.

G. C. Campbell.

The agency cup for 1937 was presented to George C. Campbell. Announcement was also made of Mr. Campbell's appointment as sales agent to Mr Choate. Mr. Campbell, having won the cup for 3 of the 12 months of 1937, became the permanent owner.

Roscoe Appiegate was holder of the cup for December. Agency leader in new volume for 1937 was Frank D. Roach. Leader in number of sales was Francis F. Miller.

Irwin Guest Banker.

Paul J. Seltzer, American Security & Trust Co., chairman of the educational committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, announces that William A. Irwin, assistant educational director of the institute, will be the guest speaker at the educational dinner on January 18 at the Willard Hotel. Mr. Irwin was recently appointed assistant to Dr. Harold Stonier, educational director,

Last-Minute Market Rally Checks Profit-Taking Selling

White House Conference of Industrial Leaders Inspires Confidence; Armament Issues Strong.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 11.—Stocks worked up a mild last-minute rally in today's market after a shifty session during which most leaders were at lower levels. Early declines running to a point or more were replaced with advances of fractions in most instances but there were a few wider upturns when the final gong sounded.

Quiet profit realizing was the rule the greater part of the day, traders being inclined to cash in at least part of their gains in view of the sharp recoveries of Saturday and Monday.

Inspiring some short covering and speculative buying at the finish, brokers said, was the calling of five prominent national industrial leaders to the White House for a conference on the present busines situation and the recession. There were thoughhts of a plan being involved at this meeting to stem the outgoing economic tide.

Utilities Higher.

With the President, in addition, holding a talk with important power and light company officials, utilities picked up a moderate following. Hopes were revived of a permanent truce between the Administration and the power corporations. Helpful also was the decision of the Wisconsin Supreme Court ruling the State's "little TVA" law unconstitutional.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 0.3 of a point, at 47.9. Transfers aggregated 1,506,260 shares, compared with 1,827,510 yesterday.

The armaments theme continued to sustain aircrafts. Douglas ran up 2¼ points in the last hour, to 45. Up fractionally were Curtiss-Wright A, at 18¼; Glenn Martin, 21; Boeing, 34⅝, and Sperry, 19½.

At the same time trade analysts warned those who may be banking on a "big Navy" "boom" that even if seven great dreadnaughts are constructed in one year, only about 200,000 tons of steel would be required, or about one-third of 1 per cent of the industry's capacity.

DuPont Issues Jump.

DuPont jumped 3¾ at 119, despite the rather gloomy picture of first half business pictured Monday by the President of this company. Others ahead were U. S. Steel at 60⅞, Bethlehem 65⅛, General Motors at 37½, Chrysler 59¾, Canada Dry 17, Yellow Truck 13⅞, Santa Fe 40½, Electric Power & Light 12⅛, American Water Works 12⅝, Dome 55, Anaconda 36¾, St. Joseph Lead 40¼ and Best & Co. 36. Some preferred issues gained ground. Budd Manufacturing moving up 4⅞ at 54⅞.

Western Union, showing a net loss in November for the first time since 1932, was down 1⅛ at 26⅜. Behind were Westinghouse at 107¾, Johns-Manville 84, J. I. Case 93, N. Y. Central 19¼ and Paramount 12⅜.

Another small lift in copper and lead prices brought support for stocks in these groups.

Bonds were mixed, with Japanese loans weak. Commodities were uneven. Wheat at Chicago lost 1⅛ to 1⅞ cents a bushel. Corn was off ¼ to ¾. Cotton was up 10 to 30 cents a bale. European currencies were down in terms of the dollar. The French franc reflected fresh political unsettlement in that country.

Japanese Bonds Weak.

Selling in the Japanese group was apparently prompted by news from Tokyo outlining results of the first imperial conference since 1914. It was predicted in some quarters the session would involve shortly a formal declaration of war against China.

Japanese government 5½s, on a fairly stable turnover, fell 3½ points, to 56½. The 6½s dropped 4⅛, to 76, while various industrial and municipal loans of the empire slid off 1 to around 7 points.

Erie and Baltimore & Ohio loans, targets of heavy selling last week, experienced renewed weakness, but dealers said the relapse appeared to have no explanation in the day's news. A few carrier bonds improved moderately, and industrials and utilities generally were supported at slightly improved levels.

United States Governments moved both ways. Federal farm loans were up 4-32ds to 9-32ds, while Treasuries closed 5-32ds lower to 1-32d higher.

Western Union 5s moved up 4, to 70; New Haven 6s, up 1, at 35; Northern Pacific 4s, up 1, at 92, and American & Foreign Power 5s, up 1½, at 58.

The Associated Press rail average dipped .3 of a point. The industrial and utility average gained as much. Transactions totaled $6,925,850, par value, again $6,579,175 yesterday.

55,000 Employes Recalled by Chrysler

Detroit, Jan. 11 (AP).—Fifty-five thousand Chrysler Corporation employes, idle since December 23, returned to work today as production was resumed in the corporation's automotive plants here. Chrysler officials said the plants would operate on either a 24-hour or 32-hour weekly basis, depending upon business conditions. They added that 20,000 workers laid off in November were not being called back at this time.

Buying Wave Lifts Copper

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—A burst of buying in copper and other industrial metals again lifted prices today, making the recovery the most robust since the autumn fall in commodity markets leveled out a few weeks ago.

Leading domestic producers of copper, after a prolonged lull, were reported in trade circles to have moved some metal at 11 cents a pound as a gap between the price quoted by smelters was almost closed. The export price held around 10.60 to 10.77½.

The American Smelting & Refining Co. raised the price of copper for delivery in the United States ¼ of a cent a pound to 10.87½. Early in December the market had dropped to around 10 cents. Producers, meanwhile, had been holding at 11, although little business was done at that price.

A further advance of .05 of a cent, equal to $1 a ton, was announced for lead, making the new quotation 4.90 cents a pound in New York.

Echoing the new year buying of raw materials in other markets, demand for industrial metals was described as brisk in contrast with almost complete suspension of buying in the last four months of 1937, while inventories were being reduced and prices were falling.

Wheat Surplus Pushes Prices 2 Cents Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Prospective big carryover supplies of wheat in the United States did much to tumble wheat values down approximately 2 cents a bushel today.

Virtual complete stoppage of any immediate European demand for wheat from North America had also a notably bearish effect. So too did the circumstance that the Buenos Aires wheat market made an abrupt right-about face following yesterday's sharp bulge there, and that in some cases Buenos Aires and Winnipeg quotations both fell 3½ cents.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were touching the day's bottom level, 1⅛-1⅞ under yesterday's finish; May, 96@96⅛; July, 90@90⅛, with corn ¼-¾ down, May 61⅝@61½, July 61⅞, oats ⅛-⅜ off, rye showing ⅜-⅞ drop, and provisions unchanged to 17 cents setback.

Cost of Living Dips in December

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—The cost of living of wage earners in December showed a decline of 0.4 per cent from November but was 2.9 per cent higher than in December, 1936, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today.

Food, rents and clothing decreased, coal advanced and sundries were unchanged, the survey showed. The purchasing power of the dollar for the month was placed at 112.9 cents compared with 112.4 in November, 116.1 in December, 1936, and 100 cents in 1923.

Penn Executive Addresses D. C. Underwriters

Though born in Ireland, Irwin received his early education in the public schools of Scotland. He completed his public school education in Canada and matriculated at McGill, University in Montreal. Soon, however, the attractions of Queens University, Livingston, Ontario, outweighed those of his first alma mater, and he joined the the ranks of the transfers there. In January, 1916, he enlisted with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

In the spring of 1919 he was honorably discharged from the Army with the rank of regimental sergeant-major and once more donned cap and gown, this time at Edinburgh University, on a scholarship from the Canadian government. In the fall of that year he received the degree of bachelor of arts from Queen's University. In May, two years later, he took his master's degree from that college with first-class honors in economics, history and political science.

Safe Deposit Section.

The January meeting of the safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will be held jointly with the auditors' section tomorrow, at 6 p. m., at the Lafayette Hotel. R. W. Freer, secretary, Central Hanover Deposit Co., New York City, will be the speaker and has selected as his subject, "Appraising the Safe Deposit Department."

Wash. Refrigeration Co.

E. G. Carroll, F. T. Francis, P. H. Erisman and members of the Washington Refrigeration Co., local distributors of air conditioning equipment, refrigeration equipment and portable room coolers for the York Ice Machinery Corporation, York, Pa., have left to attend a conference and exposition at that city.

The first showing of York's new line of air conditioning and refrigeration equipment and the 1938 sales and advertising program will be the high spots of the conference and exposition, which will be attended by more than 300 regional managers, branch managers, sales engineers and distributors from coast to coast.

Washington Refrigeration Co., a 100 per cent local concern, has been the exclusive distributors for York products for many years and has created an outstanding record in serving the public with quality equipment in both the air conditioning and refrigeration fields.

Bob Burns Says—

When baseball started to git ragged, they got Judge Landis in there to hold it together. The moving picture industry got Will Hays for the same reason, and I don't believe the Government will ever balance their budget until they git someone in there to watch the details of the spending.

My uncle Skinny Flint would be a good man for the job. One time, down home, Reverend Tweedle got up in church and said "Brothers and sisters, there's a family south of town that has been left destitute by the floods. I suggest we send them a barrel of flour, a barrel of potatoes, a barrel of salt and a barrel of pepper."

Prince Georges Board Urges Police Hearing

The Prince Georges County police commissioners, who released former Policeman Andrew J. Carrigan from the force after he had served a four-month probationary period, yesterday granted his request for a hearing on complaints against him.

The hearing was set for January 28 at Upper Marlboro, Md., after a delegation of residents from Berwyn, Md., Carrigan's home, appeared before the commissioners, who serve also as members of the police board.

The delegation, headed by two attorneys, Robert W. McCullough and William H. McGrath, presented the board with a petition bearing more than 500 signatures asking for a hearing.

Joseph H. Blandford, president of the police board, said he hoped the hearing would clear up circumstances surrounding the commissioners' refusal to reappoint the former officer. Blandford said the board was not required by law to grant the hearing.

Sir Herbert Ames to Talk.

Sir Herbert Ames, famous Canadian authority on international affairs and former adviser to the League of Nations, will address students of the University of Maryland at College Park tonight. He will speak on "The German Re-armament Problem."

Sir Herbert served as adviser to the League of Nations from 1919 to 1926. Prior to this he served as a member of the Dominion Parliament in London. Last September he was a guest of Chancellor Adolph Hitler at the huge Nazi rally at Nuremberg.

The International Relations Club of the university will sponsor Sir Herbert's address tonight.

Employes of the Holbrook Dairy plant, Brentwood, Md., last night were enrolled in the safe-driving campaign being conducted by the Charles F. Huntemann American Legion Post of Mount Rainier.

Commander J. H. Doffort, of the Mount Rainier post, presented "Safe Drivers' Club" stickers to Oliver J. Holbrook, president of the dairy company, at a meeting in his office.

Under auspices of the State Department of the American Legion and the office of the commissioner of motor vehicles, the drive is intended to raise funds, through sale of the stickers, for equipping boy patrol groups throughout the State.

Improvement of three roads was urged by three civic delegations appearing before the Prince Georges County commissioners at their meeting in Upper Marlboro, Md.

The commissioners voted to hard-surface a 5½-mile stretch of road between Clinton and Melwood, as much of the work as possible to be undertaken this year. Two other roads, one at High Bridge, Md., and the other from the Southern Maryland pike to Ashbox, Md., were included in the 1938 oiling program.

Check Is Ordered.

The Prince Georges County Bar Association, meeting at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday named a committee of three of its members to investigate reports that certain real estate offices were drawing legal papers in violation of the laws of Maryland.

J. Frank Lillard, attorney of Hyattsville, who was appointed chairman of the investigating group, said the association had received "numerous" reports that this illegal practice was being carried on. Under the code of general laws of Maryland, he declared, it is a criminal offense for real estate firms to draw up deeds, mortgages or contracts of sale.

The committee will report its findings at the association's next meeting.

Road Bureau Submits Report For Arlington

$176,255 Spent in County for Highways in Last Fiscal Year.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon, Va., Tel. Clar. 509.

The annual report of the county road department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, released yesterday by Frank C. Hanrahan, county manager, shows total expenditure of $176,255.44. This amount covered cost of maintenance, double treatment of roads, construction of a section of Wilson boulevard, gravel construction, storm sewers and costs of rights of way. The major operation during the year was the reconstruction of Wilson boulevard from North Tenth street to Glebe road with concrete 30 feet in width costing $39,000. An amount of $88,439.19 was expended for resurfacing and patching.

The report further shows that 128.37 miles of county roads were kept in good condition; 19.22 miles given gravel treatment; 37.47 surface treated, making a total of 185.06 miles of road worked on in the year.

During the year 2.61 miles was added to county roads by dedication by sub-division owners.

Total mileage is 260.63, which includes 9.73 miles of Federal highways, and 30.09 of State highways leaving 220.81 miles of road under county control.

Commenting on the report, Hanrahan said: "By making the same comparison of improved highways in 1932, it will be seen in the 5-year period that we have improved the surfaces for the first time of 21.79 miles or an average of 4 miles a year."

In the five-year peroid, the PWA sewerage program was started and was completed. This construction caused reconstruction of approximately 35 miles of county roads, paid from PWA funds.

At the meeting, the budget, finance and program committee and the membreship committee will meet with the directors. The purpose, as explained by President Erle Kirby, is to complete plans to put into action the recommendations of the budget, finance and program committee for an intensive drive to "Sell Arlington County" by means of a publicity campaign.

Adopting the draft of the revised by-laws as submitted by the special committee, headed by Walter U. Varney, it was voted to hold a membership meeting the night of February 21 to ratify the action of the directors.

The efficiency of the fire drill was demonstrated yesterday in Alexandria, when 445 pupils of the Parker-Gray School for colored, Prof. Wesley D. Elam, principal, marched from the building while a fire raged in the auditorium of the school, the majority of the pupils thinking it only the regular drill staged at intervals for a safety measure.

Effie May Poole, 'China' Bones Girl, Back in Hospital

Effie May Poole, 7, of Herndon, Va., the little girl with "china" bones, is back again at Georgetown Hospital. This time she is there by appointment, not by accident.

Physicians must rebreak and straighten her left leg, already broken several times in falls. It is her sixth trip to Georgetown, the last resulting from a fall in which both wrists and her left leg were broken.

Effie May is suffering, doctors say, from osteo genesis imperfecta. Scientists aren't sure what causes this malady, though some say it results from insufficient calcium, the material which gives bones hardness.

Even though the disease is considered all but incurable, Effie has a chance to recover because she has such an early start.

Town Planning Unit Asked at Falls Church

Board Asked to Co-operate With Other Groups in Section.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. BOX 246, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 38-W-2.

The zoning and building committee of the Falls Church town council last night recommended the adoption of an ordinance creating a town planning board to act in conjunction with similar boards or commissions in Arlington and Fairfax counties and the city of Alexandria in working for the development of northern Virginia. The recommendation will be considered at a special meeting of the town council Thursday night—when town ordinances will be given a second reading.

The council has so far gone through all of the town's ordinances which have been adopted since 1916, when the town ordinances were last revised. Many are being revised, rearranged and simplified to meet changing conditions. A new traffic ordinance will be prepared, codifying all the regulations governing traffic, parking and other highway problems. Plumbing, building, sewer, zoning ordinances will be revised and checked. When the work is completed, it is expected to issue ordinances in pamphlet form or otherwise make them available to the public.

Building permits totaling $16,900 were granted, including a $7,500 house on Columbia street, a $4,000 house on West Broad street, $4,000 alterations to the Lawton house and a roadside market on the Clark Crossman property adjoining McPherson's garage. A petition for improvement of Fairfax street in front of the Presbyterian Church was referred to the road board for consideration. Very little of the highway work planned under the new budget will be started during the winter months, the Mayor stated.

Among the honor guests were Louis J. Taber, national master, accompanied by his executive committee; Fred J. Freestone, past master of New York State; Ray W. Gill, master of Oregon; E. A. Eckert, master State of Illinois, and Fred Brenkman, national Grange representative in Congress.

Ask Recreation Center.

The need for an adequate recreation center for the town of Falls Church was emphasized last night at the meeting of the Falls Church Community Theater. S. Barry Grubb was made chairman of a committee composed of Edward Rowan, William Clayton Pryor, Edward G. Fenwick and J. O. Martin to work with similar committees from other organizations interested in securing facilities.

Grubb briefly outlined what the Young Democrats had endeavored to do two years ago when E. T. Fenwick had offered to donate $5,000 provided the community raised an equal sum. Plans for an elaborate building and grounds fell through. Similarly, a more recent proposal to build a school gymnasium and athletic center seem to be at a standstill.

William Clayton Pryor resigned as production manager, due to press of other business, and J. O. Martin was elected in his place. Mrs. J. H. Chambliss, who will direct the next full-length play, outlined several under consideration. Selection was referred to a committee consisting of Mrs. Chambliss, Capt. Crawford, Frederic Wright and J. O. Martin.

The entertainment, in charge of J. O. Martin, took the form of a variety show. A group of Irish songs was sung by Miss Kathleen McGinnis and Allonzo Allison, in costume, with Dr. Bernard Schultz accompanying on the violin. An original skit, written and acted by Mrs. Loren Pope, was followed by two readings by Mrs. Henry Davis. Dr. Schultz, accompanied by Mrs. J. W. Brown on the piano, played the meditation from "Thais" and Kreitzler's "Caprice." Mrs. Ward B. Freeman sang "By the Waters of Minnetonka" and "Where My Caravan Has Rested," accompanied by Mrs. Brown and Dr. Schultz.

The closing number was a blackface group, directed by Mrs. J. H. Chambliss, with solos by Allonzo Allison.

The Big Apple was interpreted by Miss Virginia Barrett, Miss Ann Covington, Miss Jane Ingling, Jack Martin, Harry McGinnis, Chester Brandon, Paul Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Stoutenburgh.

James directors for the coming year. The report of the chairman, Dr. Miller, showed the volume of business exceeded that of the previous year by more than $1,000 a month. Stockholders adopted a resolution of appreciation for service rendered by Dr. Miller, Secretary Pobst and their associates.

School Board Upholds Ban on Non-Saluters

The Prince Georges County board of education, meeting at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday disregarded Mr. and Mrs. August A. Ludke's plea that their six children, banned for refusal to salute the flag, be allowed to return to school.

Mr. and Mrs. Ludke and Charles C. Eberle, company servant of the Washington Company of Jehovah's Witnesses, appeared before the board. Eberle read a nine-page petition, asking that the board restore "freedom to worship Almighty God" in the State of Maryland.

Without further comment on the case, the school board closed the hearing by instructing its secretary, School Superintendent Nicholas Orem, to enter in the minutes that the case already had been disposed of by the circuit court.

The court's decision in the case, handed down last fall on a petition for a writ of mandamus, which would have enabled the children to return to school, was favorable to the school board.

In their petition to the board, the Ludkes stated that more than 200 children of Jehovah's Witnesses' families had been expelled from the public schools. Action of the school board was described as indicative of a "Nazi concept of religious freedom."
